

UNDERSTANDING ALLERGIES

What Is An Allergy?

An allergy is an overreaction or hypersensitivity of the body's immune system to normally harmless substances, called allergens. An allergic reaction occurs when the body's immune system responds to an allergen as if the substance were disease-causing. Subsequent exposure to the substance can result in physical symptoms that range from mild to severe.

Who Gets Allergies?

The tendency to develop allergies is thought to be inherited, because they commonly develop in those who have a family history of allergies. It is possible for anyone to develop allergies at any age. Allergies often occur in clusters and affect both children and adults. This could mean allergen exposure to people with no family history or those diagnosed in those with a family history.

What Are Common Allergens?

Allergens can enter the body in a number of different ways, including inhaling pollen, drinking, ingesting (as with hot sauce), and contact with the skin or eyes. Common allergens include pollen, mold, animal hair or dander, dust mites, certain medications like penicillin, petroleum, and certain foods like peanuts, grains, eggs, milk, wheat, and soybeans.

Anaphylaxis: An Allergic Emergency

Anaphylaxis is a life-threatening reaction. The onset of this reaction may occur within minutes or minutes of exposure. Symptoms can include a rash and swelling of the face. Skin hives occur on the neck, where tightening and swelling of the airway make breathing difficult, and there is a drop in blood pressure. Swelling can stop and the body may stop responding, if medication is not administered quickly. Swelling and death can result. Common reactions to this reaction include food allergies, the chemical dyes and medications such as antibiotics are more likely to cause anaphylaxis than are any other allergens. Anaphylaxis is not a common reaction and can be prevented with proper medication and the help of a physician.

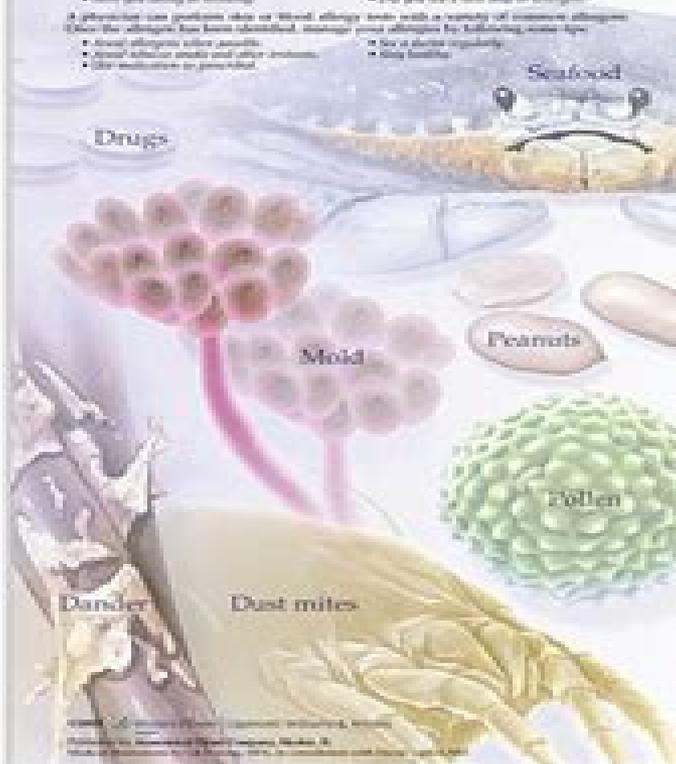

Managing Allergies

The first step in managing allergies is to identify the type of reaction you are having, whether it is an acute, chronic, or difficulty breathing. Second, try to identify the trigger in the reaction that led to the symptoms. Ask yourself a few questions:

- Did you eat anything new?
- Did you use any new medicine?
- Did you get a new pet?
- Did you go outside?
- Did you get a new job or hobby?
- Did you get a new car or truck?
- Did you get a new pet?
- Did you get a new job or hobby?

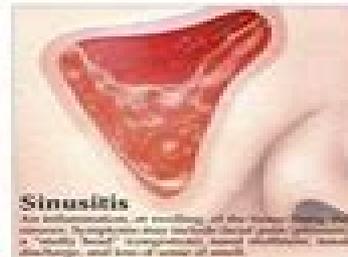

A physician can perform skin or blood allergy tests with a variety of common allergens. Once the allergen has been identified, manage your allergies by following some tips:

- Avoid allergen after meals.
- Use a dust mite cover.
- Use a humidifier in your home.
- Use a dust mite cover.
- Stop smoking.

Hay Fever (allergic rhinitis)

It is caused by an overreaction to pollen and other allergens. It affects the upper airway. Common symptoms include sneezing, itchy nose, itchy throat, and watery, itchy, swollen, and red eyes.

Sinusitis

An infection or an swelling of the sinus cavity. Common symptoms include facial pain, pressure, a "stuffy nose", congestion, nasal discharge, and loss of sense of smell.

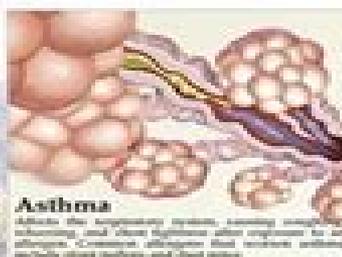

Eczema (atopic dermatitis)

A group of medical conditions that cause the skin to become inflamed or irritated. It causes itching and rashes on the skin characterized by lesions, scaling, and flaking.

Hives (urticaria)

An intensely itchy rash, pain and burning. An infection (usually on the skin), or a result of the body's allergic reaction to certain allergens, or the substance itself.

Asthma

Affects the respiratory system, causing wheezing, coughing, and difficulty breathing. It is caused by an overreaction to an allergen. Common symptoms include chest tightness, coughing, and shortness of breath.

Contact Dermatitis

An inflammation of the skin caused by direct contact with an irritant or allergen. It causes redness, itching, swelling, or blisters on the skin.

Allergic Conjunctivitis

An inflammation of the conjunctiva, the tissue that lines the inner and outer surfaces of the eye. It is caused by an overreaction to an allergen. The eye becomes red, itchy, and watery.

Food Allergies

Symptoms include swelling of lips, throat, face, and tongue; rapid breathing; vomiting; abdominal cramping; hives; and skin rashes. Food allergies occur for the following reasons:

Drug Allergies

Certain medications can trigger allergic reactions ranging from mild rashes to life-threatening symptoms, which can affect any tissue or organ in the body.

Household Allergies

They often are environmental irritants that lead to hay fever and other symptoms. Many are completely avoidable, such as pollen, mold, dust, and pet dander. After you are diagnosed for a specific condition, ask your doctor about the best ways to avoid the most common types of allergens, and use a proper course of action.
