

Abercrombie, JOHN (1780-1844), Scottish physician, was born at Aberdeen, a parish minister's son. He studied and practised medicine in Edinburgh; and after the death (in 1821) of the celebrated Dr Gregory, was recognised as the first successful physician in Scotland. He wrote on the catarrh of the brain and on diseases of the stomach, but he is best known by his Satellites (1797) and Morbid Feelings (1833).

Abercrombie, JASCELLES, born 15th January 1881, was educated at Malvern, Worcester University, became lecturer in poetry in Liverpool University in 1919, professor of English at Leeds in 1922. Besides studies of Thomas Hardy, the epic, Theory of Art (1922), The Theory of Poetry (1924), and The Idea of Great Poetry (1925), he published Interludes and Poems (1908), Mary and the Bramble (1910), Deborah (blank-verse drama, 1913), and Short Plays (1922), which quickly established his name as a poet with metaphysical leanings.

Abercromby, SIR RALPH, was born at Monstrie, Clackmannanshire, 7th October 1734. Destined for the Scottish bar, he was educated at Rugby, and then from 1752 to 1755 studied law at Edinburgh and Leipzig. But having in 1756 obtained a cornetcy in the 3d Dragoon Guards, he two years later saw some active service in the Seven Years' War. From 1774 to 1780 he represented Clackmannanshire in parliament; and in 1780 raised a regiment in Ireland, the 103d, or King's Irish. In 1793 he accompanied the Duke of York to Holland. His conduct throughout that unfortunate campaign, especially during the disastrous retreat in the winter of 1794-5, won him the love and admiration of the whole army. On his return to England, he was made a Knight of the Bath, and was appointed to the chief command of the West Indies Expedition, which he conducted with distinguished success. In 1797 he was sent to command the forces in Ireland; but his policy, and mainly remonstrances against the government towards that country, led to his removal to a similar command in Sicily. In 1799 he was second in command to Lord Cornwallis in the other unhappy expedition to Holland. On his return, he received the command of the expedition to the Mediterranean. The fleet anchored in Aboukir Bay on 2d March 1801; and before mid-day of the 8th, the British ships were in possession of the sand-hills facing the French camp, having landed in the face of the storm of shot. On the morning of the 14th the British camp. He found them ready, under arms. In the glorious action that ensued, Abercromby was struck by a musket-ball in the thigh, but not till the battle was won did he show any sign of pain. The ball could not be extracted, and artificial means ensued; and on the 28th he died of the wound. A monument was erected to him in the church of St Andrew, which was conferred on his widow. He was succeeded by his eldest son, with the exception of one Abercromby—His third son, JAMES (1766-1828), entered parliament in 1807, held the office of speaker of the House of Commons, and was then created Baron Danfermline. He was author of a Memoir of the last eight years of his father's life (1861).

Aberdare, ABERDARE, a town and parish of Glamorgan, of Merthyr-Tydfil, and Aberdare, Glamorgan, pop. 55,000.

Aberdare, HENRY AUSTIN BUTTS, 1st Baron (1815-95), born at Dyrnys, Glamorgan, was Home Secretary (1875-77) and President of the Council (1873-74), and received a peerage (1873). After him as President of the Royal Geographical Society the Aberdare Range in Africa was named.

Aberdeen, the chief city and seaport in the north of Scotland, is 98 miles N.N.E. of Edinburgh as the crow flies, and 528 N.W. of London. (The distances by rail are rather longer.) The burgh, which lies at the mouth of the Don—the Don being

5 miles north of it—was founded somewhere about the 7th or 8th century. It is said to have been founded by a Scot, who fled from the Picts, and to have been named after a foreign nobleman, David I. (1124-53). The name is derived from the Latin Abere (to flow), to whom the mother-church of the city was dedicated, and it still bears his name. The figure of the patron saint is on the high seal, or coat of arms, of the burgh.

The Old Aberdeen (the name of the burgh is still in the burgh seal) is a small town, but it has a fine view of the city, and the burgh is bounded by the sea on the east and south. It is situated on the high ground of the city, and is bounded by the sea on the east and south. It is situated on the high ground of the city, and is bounded by the sea on the east and south. It is situated on the high ground of the city, and is bounded by the sea on the east and south.

The burgh is notable for its historical associations, for its educational record, its commercial enterprise, and its aspect as a city. The castle of Aberdeen, that stood on what is known still as the Castlehill, and was held by an English garrison for Edward I., was stormed by the forces of Robert the Bruce in 1308, and was then demolished. The hexagonal arched Market Cross (successor of an earlier one) was erected in 1685, and the Market Cross of Edinburgh (see above) which Sir Walter Scott so lamented in his poem, is now the finest historical monument in Scotland.

The city is distinguished in particular by its architecture, its central sculpture, and its fine collection of medals and portraits of the great men of the burgh, the frieze. The cathedral, dedicated to St Machar, is the only granite cathedral in the British Isles. The Bridge of Balgownie, near the cathedral, is one of the finest structures of the 17th century, and is a fine example of the work of the architect Sir James Gait. The Bridge of George, built by Gavin Hamilton in 1720, is a fine example of the work of the architect Sir James Gait.

The city has been a seat of learning for centuries. In 1494 Bishop Elphinstone founded King's College, and in 1593 Marischal College and University was founded by the Earl Marischal. The city has a fine collection of medals and portraits of the great men of the burgh, the frieze. The cathedral, dedicated to St Machar, is the only granite cathedral in the British Isles. The Bridge of Balgownie, near the cathedral, is one of the finest structures of the 17th century, and is a fine example of the work of the architect Sir James Gait.

The city has over thirty splendid primary and secondary schools, all fully and keenly in use. The trade of Aberdeen has been of consequence since the 13th century. As the records of the accounts of Edward I. show, part of the provisions of the English armies that invaded Scotland consisted of provisions from Aberdeen. The city has a fine collection of medals and portraits of the great men of the burgh, the frieze. The cathedral, dedicated to St Machar, is the only granite cathedral in the British Isles.
