

CHINA'S SOCIAL CREDIT SYSTEM

It's been dubbed the most ambitious experiment in digital social control ever undertaken. The Chinese government plans to launch its Social Credit System nationally by 2020.

WHAT'S THE AIMS?

The system intends to monitor, rate and regulate the financial, social, moral and, possibly, political behavior of China's citizens - and also the country's companies - via a system of punishments and rewards. The stated aim is to "provide the credibility with benefits and discipline the untrustworthy."

The Chinese government considers the system an important tool to boost China's economy and to govern society. There is still much speculation about how the final system will actually function. Details in this chart are based on expert estimates and plausible expert expectations.

HOW DOES IT WORK?

Each citizen is expected to be given a social credit score that will increase or decrease depending on whether the subject's social behavior is acceptable.

The system is expected to draw on huge amounts of data about each and every individual, gathered from traditional sources - such as financial, criminal and government records - and adding data from registry offices or school officials - along with digital sources. The latter include data collected on the Internet, such as the subject's search history, shopping preferences on e-commerce sites and interactions on social media.

Moreover, the system could also rely on information obtained through video surveillance systems with help from facial recognition technology.
