Urban Air Quality Management Strategy In Asia Guidebook:

Urban Air Quality Management Strategy in Asia Jitendra J. Shah, Tanvi Nagpal, 1997-01-01 There is ample empirical evidence of a negative relationship between aspects of institutional uncertainty and investment. Most studies however do not allow a comparison between different dimensions of such uncertainty because they focus on specific indicators, particular regions or different periods. In order to gain comparable results, this paper tests the most prominent uncertainty measures in investment regressions using the same specifications while holding constant the country sample as well as the time period. We find a number of indicators that are significant and robust to changes in specification. The paper concludes with a comparative evaluation of the quantitative effects of the significant uncertainty indicators on aggregate rates of investment.

Management Strategy in Asia Jitendra J. Shah, Tanvi Nagpal, 1997 World Bank Technical Paper No 378 In the cities of Nepal's Kathmandu Valley the main contributor of air pollution comes from the transport sector followed by power plants, industrial units and burning of garbage. Fuel quality and engine conditions significantly influence the level of air pollution. In response to this growing problem the Urban Environment Management Committee was launched to assist local institutions in developing action plans that would be an integral part of their air quality management system. This report focuses on the development of the air quality management system and concludes with an action plan for air pollution abatement that takes into account the economic costs and benefits of abatement measures for the Kathmandu Valley.
