World Forests From Deforestation To Transition:

World Forests from Deforestation to Transition? Matti Palo, Heidi Vanhanen, 2012-12-06 This book addresses global and subnational issues concerning the world's forests, societies and environment from an independent and non-governmental point of view. Cooperation on a global scale is not only commendable; it is essential if solutions to the problems facing the world's forests are to be found. To achieve this, modern science needs to draw a clearer picture of relationships between forests, human activity and the environment, and of the consequences of environmental change for the societies' development and growth. There are several partly intermingled evolutionary forest transitions underway: the slow transition from forest area decrease to an increase in the North, while deforestation and degradation continues in the South. Although not all deforestation is considered negative, serious social, economic and environmental costs may be associated with excessive deforestation. Deforestation control is just the first step on the stony path towards sustainable forest management. The forest management transition refers to the shift in the utilization towards managed, semi-natural, secondary forests and plantation forests. There are some signs in the North of the forest paradigm shift from sustainable yield to forest ecosystem concepts. How deforestation can be tackled and how these concurrent transitions are effected will have profound implications for the future. These processes involve several challenges with South-North dimensions. A search for an optimum mix of public policies and markets is a global priority, both as a forest policy issue and as an inter-sectoral item on the political agenda. Deforestation and transition is discussed here by a team of 14 scientists from both the North and the South. This book offers knowledge, facts and information about world forests, society and environment to help us towards equity in our use of the global forest to create a clearer vision of unasyuva.

Integrative Approaches Towards Sustainability in the Baltic Sea Region Walter Leal Filho, A. P. Ubelis, 2004 The challenges of sustainable development require that everybody every institution and every nation work towards long term strategies in order to move away from unsustainable practices The same line of thinking applies to all nations around the Baltic Sea A general challenge for the Baltic Sea region is to broaden the interest of people in discussions of national approaches supporting sustainability Finding effective instruments to support the process of sustainable development in countries in transition with an emerging and largely inexperienced entrepreneur community and economically fragile is as important as the promotion of long term integrated sustainability strategies in countries which have well established democracies The knowledge of the ongoing changes and the driving social economic and ecological factors essential for the implementation of sustainable development in countries in transition must be broadened A special need seen in the three Baltic countries Lithuania Latvia and Estonia as elsewhere in the Baltic region is the need to avoid development patterns of business as usual and to gain access to information and to advancements in sustainable development both in Europe and worldwide The Baltic countries now joining the EU have to build capacity for example by establishing teams of young researchers to draw up sustainable development strategies at the national level which are consistent with European strategies A bottom up flow from the grass root level is required to change the pattern of development strategies in the Baltic countries The Conference Integrative Approaches Towards Sustainability whose experiences are documented in this book was held on 26-29 March 2003 Econometric Analysis of the Causes of Forest Land Use Changes in Hainan, China Yaoqi
