Lexical Priming Michael Hoey, 2012-10-12 Lexical Priming proposes a radical new theory of the lexicon which amounts to a completely new theory of language based on how words are used in the real world Here they are not confined to the definitions given to them in dictionaries but instead interact with other words in common patterns of use Using concrete statistical evidence from a corpus of newspaper English but also referring to travel writing and literary text the author argues that words are primed for use through our experience with them so that everything we know about a word is a product of our encounters with it This knowledge explains how speakers of a language succeed in being fluent creative and natural

The Gracing of Human Experience Donald L. Gelpi SJ, 2008-04-01 This study ponders different ways Christian thinkers understood humanity in its relationship to divine grace It names fallacies that have in the past skewed theological understanding of that relationship It argues that the philosophy of Charles Sanders Peirce avoided those same fallacies and provides a novel frame of reference for rethinking the theology of grace The author shows how the insights of other American philosophers flesh out undeveloped aspects of Peirce's thought He formulates a metaphysics of experience derived from his philosophical analysis Finally he develops an understanding of supernatural grace as the transmutation and transvaluation of human experience
