Primitive Man Louis Figuier, 1870 Primitive Man and His World Picture Wilhelm Koppers, 1952 Mind of Primitive Man Franz Boas, 1911 In this landmark text of anthropology, Franz Boas profiles various groups of primitive peoples, analyzing their hereditary characteristics, morphology, language, and cultures. Brimming with incisive analysis and fascinating interpretations of early man, Boas begins by acknowledging the sheer diversity of peoples in the world. The variation in language, physical appearance, cultural mores, and traditions are extraordinary, with differing behavioral standards and practices unique to each. Though dealing with a formidable subject of global scope, the author proceeds with determination and intellectual rigor, demonstrating how geographic disparity, variations in climate, and divergent psychology resulted in distinct cultures. Famous for challenging existing views, including those of eugenics and white supremacy, The Mind of Primitive Man became a foundational text of modern anthropological science. Its well-argued topics, rooted in the author's voracious study and experience, contradicted existing theories and assumptions of nature versus nurture and the relationship between environment and human intelligence. For his part, Boas held out hope that anthropology would form a role in education, increasing tolerance for the differences between cultures and acknowledging the value all have contributed.

Gott und Mensch in der primitiven Welt. - (The world of primitive man Paul Radin, Margherita von Wyss, 1953 The Mind of Primitive Man Franz Boas, 1911 A course of lectures delivered before the Lowell Institute, Boston, Mass., and the National University of Mexico, 1910-1911. This landmark collection of lectures reflects Franz Boas's theories that previous studies of societies based on criteria of Western observers were largely subjective; each society and culture is the result of unique historical developments. He also believed there was no such thing as a pure race or a superior one.
