

Upper Atmosphere

The Earth's atmosphere has four primary layers: the troposphere, stratosphere, mesosphere, and thermosphere. These layers protect our planet by absorbing harmful radiation.

Absorbing Ice in the Mesosphere (JUNO)

JUNO's scanning of ice in the Mesosphere (JUNO) reveals ice crystals were right where clouds in the mesosphere. These ice-filled clouds are made of ice crystals that form over the summer pole at an altitude 50 to 60 miles and a temperature too cold for water vapor clouds.

Thermosphere 50-600 Miles

In the Thermosphere, molecules of oxygen and nitrogen are ionospheric by molecules and completely ionized from the Sun, causing the ionosphere. It acts as the first ionospheric shield and creates heat. The thermosphere increases in temperature with altitude because the atoms, oxygen and nitrogen cannot collide to cool the this structure.

Mesosphere 50-85 Miles

During the mesosphere it is possible to understand why this change in the Earth's atmosphere and why there change over time. There the mesosphere is responsible to most changes in atmospheric density and composition. It could provide them to identify, and it the other greenhouse gases and methods to a change in temperature in a water composition in the atmosphere.

Stratosphere 50-100 Miles

The lower layer has within the stratosphere and stratosphere shields from the Sun.

Troposphere 0-10 Miles

The troposphere is the layer of the Earth's atmosphere where all human activity takes place.

Ionosphere

The ionosphere is a layer of plasma formed by the ionization of atomic oxygen and nitrogen by highly energetic ultraviolet and X-ray solar radiation. The ionosphere extends from the bottom of the stratosphere up to the mesosphere. This layer varies daily on the surface exposure to solar radiation caused by ionization of the atoms, but can extend down as far as the mesosphere. However, these upper atmospheric layers are still mostly neutral, with only one in a million particles becoming charged daily. At night, the ionosphere usually collapses in the dark, but still some amount of charged atoms caused by cosmic radiation.

Balloons, Balloons, and Satellites

JUNO scientists use balloons to collect in-situ measurements in the atmosphere. However, the mesosphere and thermosphere are too high for balloons to reach, so scientists use instruments on sounding balloons and satellites to gather more detailed measurements of the upper atmosphere.

Communication

A unique property of the ionosphere is that it can reflect short-wave radio waves, enabling communication over great distances by "bouncing" signals off the actual atmosphere layer. Variability of the ionosphere can interrupt satellite communication, such as errors in GPS signals for commercial air navigation. During solar storms, this layer can even shut down communication between ground stations and satellites.

Reddened Clouds in the Mesosphere

Evidence of changes in the behavior of reddened clouds has been observed by the JUNO mission. Recent data show dramatically less in ice content, leading scientists to speculate about changes in weather conditions and pole-to-pole atmospheric circulation.

BARREL

The Ballot Army for Radiation-Induced Relativistic Electron Losses (BARREL) is a balloon-based mission to expand the measurements of NASA's STEP spacecraft. BARREL seeks to measure the precipitation of relativistic electrons from the ionosphere belts during two multi-balloon campaigns operated in the Southern Hemisphere.
