Urbanizing China:

Urbanizing China Gregory Guldin, 1992-04-30 Can China now be considered urbanized Unlike earlier studies that viewed China as a peasant or rural society this book focuses on the question of whether China is already urbanized Each of the contributors considers the degree to which the town country dichotomy has been obliterated in the China of the 1980s and 1990s The focus is unique for previous studies have failed to raise this fundamental question The contributors to the volume who are from China Hong Kong the United States and Canada collectively address China s past and continuing transformation the multiple factors influencing the urbanization of Chinese society and the strengths and weaknesses in China s transformation China s urbanization the authors claim can be traced to two successful development strategies small town development and coastal economic reforms These strategies however raise the question of how China should deal with uneven and inequitable regional growth China s solution Guldin says has been to mix economic liberalization and an emphasis on small town development with a still significant degree of central planning The work is interdisciplinary with contributions from the fields of sociology geography anthropology and urban planning It should be of interest to scholars from all of those disciplines with a special interest in China

The Way of Urbanizing China Shilin Liu, 2023-12-16 The book conducts a comprehensive research study on China s urbanization It puts forward three theoretical development models of urban planning in China i e the politics oriented city the economy oriented city and the human oriented cultural city It makes objective evaluations of the development models of the politics oriented city and the economy oriented city It suggests that relations between the government and the market should be straightened out to solve the hangovers of the development model of the politics oriented city and eco civilization development and cultural development should be put on the top of the government s agenda in order to cope with the recurring problems and complications brought about by the development model of the economy oriented city

Urbanizing China in War and Peace Toby Lincoln, 2015-05-31 Urbanizing China in War and Peace rewrites the history of rural urban relations in the first half of the twentieth century by arguing that urbanization is a total societal transformation and as important a factor as revolution nationalism or modernity in the history of modern China Linking the global and the local in space and time China s urbanization was not only driven by industrial capitalism and the expansion of the state but also shaped how these forces influenced daily life in the city and the countryside Although the conflict that beset China after the Japanese invasion in 1937 affected the development of cities towns and villages it did not derail previous changes To truly understand how China has emerged as the world s largest urban society we must consider such continuities across the first half of the twentieth century during periods of war as well as peace The book focuses on Wuxi a city that lies a hundred miles to the west of Shanghai In the early twentieth century local industrialists were responsible for it quickly becoming the largest industrial city in China outside treaty ports They built factories roads and other infrastructure outside the old city walls and in surrounding towns and villages Chapters examine the county's transformation as recorded in guidebooks and travel magazines of the time and the role of the state in the early 1920s and into the Nanjing Decade when new administrative laws led to the continued expansion of the city under both municipal and county officials. They explore the revival of the silk industry during the Japanese occupation and the industry's role in driving urbanization as well as efforts by Chinese leaders to carry out prewar development plans despite lockdowns and qingxiang clean the countryside campaigns. In the midst of the barbed wire and watch towers plans to shape the built environment in Wuxi County and the region as a whole persisted and were carried out. Ambitious and well researched Urbanizing China in War and Peace will appeal to scholars and students of Chinese urban history the Anti Japanese War of Resistance and the Republican period. Its engagement with issues of urbanization in general will interest urban historians of other times and places.

China Urbanizing Weiping Wu, Qin Gao, 2022-09-20. China turned majority urban only in the recent decade a dramatic leap given that less than 20 percent of its population lived in cities before 1980. This book situates China's urbanization in the interconnected forces of historical legacies contemporary state interventions and human and ecological conditions. It captures the complexity of the phenomenon of urbanization in its historical and regional variations and explores its impact on the country's socioeconomic welfare environment and resources urban form and lifestyle and population and health. It is also a book about China in which the contributors provide new perspectives to understand the transitions underway and the gravity of the progress particularly in the context of demographic shifts and climate change. The chapters in China Urbanizing written by American and Chinese scholars achieve three interconnected aims. The first is to explore how the process of urbanization has shaped and been influenced by the social economic and physical interactions that take place in and beyond cities and the state interventions intended to regulate such interactions. The second is to examine the shifts and evolutions emerging in urban China such as the economic slowdown population aging and low fertility rates and how cities interact with the environment and planet given China's rising role in the global discourse on climate change. The third is to explore new sources of information for conducting research on urban China such as satellite and street level imagery data and online listings to account for the complexity and heterogeneity that characterize contemporary Chinese urbanization. planning and design From Village Commons to Public Goods Anne-Christine Trémon, 2023-06-09 Illuminating the complex processes of China's uneven urbanization through the lens of the transition from village commons to public goods this book is set in three urbanized villages in Shenzhen Chengdu and Xi'an which have experienced similar demographic explosions and dramatic changes to their landscapes the livelihoods of its inhabitants and the power structures governing their residents Graduated provision is the delivery of public goods informed by the teleological ideology of urbanization and by neoliberalism with Chinese characteristics and has been employed as an answer to the challenges of making public goods such as welfare provisions public parks education and senior care equally accessible to all in recently urbanized communities

Urbanizing China Lakshmi Iyer, G. A. Donovan, Urbanization in China Houkai Wei, 2018-07-30 This book traces the history of urbanization in China and discusses major problems and challenges the country is facing as it undergoes a profound social transformation The author argues that as China tries to build not just more but also better cities i.e. cities that are not only economically competitive but also people and environment friendly it should adopt urbanization strategies and policies that promote integrated development for both rural and urban areas and coordination among otherwise disparate objectives such as industrialization ecological modernization informatization and cultural heritage preservation nationwide and at various scales China's Urbanization and Socioeconomic Impact Zongli Tang, 2017-06-26 This book examines the impacts of China's urbanization on the country's economic development clan culture rural societies minority resident areas natural environment women and public policy reforms drawing on official statistics independent survey data archives and fieldwork research to do so Adopting a cross disciplinary perspective the book places special emphasis on issues that have been neglected in prior studies and provides up to date information reports and analyses based on the latest events Further it considers future directions and strategies regarding urban development discusses regional urbanization in selected poor and backward western provinces analyzes changes in traditional clan culture brought on by urbanization and explores evolutions in local clan societies in the Qin and Han Dynasties when cities expanded and business flourished Lastly the book examines the effects of infrastructure related determinants on urban expansion rates and urban land prices demonstrates the ebbs and flows of public opinion regarding various environmental issues discusses planned real estate tax reform and assesses the impact of demographic and socioeconomic changes on young unmarried women Urbanizing China in War and Peace Toby Lincoln, 2015-05-31 Urbanizing China in War and Peace rewrites the history of rural urban relations in the first half of the twentieth century by arguing that urbanization is a total societal transformation and as important a factor as revolution nationalism or modernity in the history of modern China Linking the global and the local in space and time China's urbanization was not only driven by industrial capitalism and the expansion of the state but also shaped how these forces influenced daily life in the city and the countryside Although the conflict that beset China after the Japanese invasion in 1937 affected the development of cities towns and villages it did not derail previous changes To truly understand how China has emerged as the world's largest urban society we must consider such continuities across the first half of the twentieth century during periods of war as well as peace. The book focuses on Wuxi, a city that lies a hundred miles to the west of Shanghai. In the early twentieth century, local industrialists were responsible for it quickly becoming the largest industrial city in China outside treaty ports. They built factories, roads, and other infrastructure outside the old city walls and in surrounding towns and villages. China's Great Urbanization Zheng Yongnian, Zhao Litao, Sarah Tong, 2016-10-04. China's extraordinary economic boom since the late 1970s has been accompanied by massive urbanization, with the proportion of the population living in cities rising from 18% in 1978 to 54% in 2014. Currently, the Chinese government has amongst its objectives the target to increase this to 60% by 2020 and also to improve the quality of China's cities. This book examines a wide range of issues connected to China's urbanization. It considers the many problems which have come with rapid urbanization, including urban housing problems, difficulties affecting rural migrants in urban areas, and a lack of social protection. It examines areas of current reform, including land reform, shanty town renewal, and moves to address environmental problems. It explores governance issues and throughout assesses how urbanization in China is likely to develop in future.

China's New Urbanization Strategy China Development Research Foundation, 2013-04-02. Urbanization is one of the major challenges facing China. Of China's 1.3 billion people, around half still live in rural areas. There has been huge migration from rural areas to cities in recent years, a trend that is likely to continue strong for some time. The strains that this vast migration puts on China's cities are enormous. This book makes available for the English-speaking reader the results of a large group of research projects undertaken by CDRF, one of China's leading think tanks, into the details of rural-urban migration, the resulting urban growth, and the problems associated with all this. The book goes on to put forward a new strategy which aims to ensure that China's urbanization proceeds in an orderly manner and that people and their needs are put at the centre of the strategy. Key parts of the strategy include that city clusters should become the main form of urbanization, that these should be arranged geographically in a pattern of two horizontal lines and three vertical lines, that industrial and employment structures should highlight regional features and diversity that urban public services should be more equitably distributed that there should be new forms of urbanization management and city governance to accelerate urbanization and ensure harmonious social development and that the whole process should be conducted in an ecological green way

The urbanization process in China and its impacts on the environment Thomas Schneider,2015-11-23 This paper reviews the urbanization process in China during the past decades and gives a prospect for the near future It is shown that in a remarkably short period China increased its urban population to more than 50 percent of the entire population This rapid urbanization was mainly driven by rural urban migration in the course of the industrialization process and by the in situ urbanization as a mainly government related factor The paper afterwards identifies energy and resources pollution and land consumption as the major areas where by urbanization caused challenges need to be tackled
