

STEREO

Best album by the English rock band The Soft Machine (named after William S. Burroughs' novel), one of the best avant-garde recordings, along with Caravan, of the "Camberwell Sound". The masterpiece was released in 1968 and features the hit of Robert Wyatt (Piano & vocals), Mike Ratledge (Organ & piano) and Kevin Ayers (Sax, vocals & piano). This was the only album by the band showcasing Ayers. Additional personnel included bassist Hugh Hopper (who would later become a prominent musician after Ayers' departure) and the 1967 rock group The Gods. The first alternative rock cover of this first album is mounted at the legendary Manhattan club, The Bitter End, which had been frequented with Jimi Hendrix's Electric Ladyland that same year. The album was given a 5-star rating on AllMusic by reviewer Richie Unterberger. The group is considered one of the most influential underground bands of their era.
