SOLAR AND LUNAR RETURNS

The solar return is a 'revolution' chart erected for the exact time when the sun returns to the same longitude as at your birth. This occurs each year within a day or two of your birthday. Similarly, the lunar return is calculated for the moon, which recurs every 27 days or so.

Unlike other types of return, these are personal and calculable separately for the individual. The solar chart indicates events which will be experienced during the year from the date of the return, while the lunar chart gives a more short-term indication of conditions.

This book is a comprehensive study of the various techniques of solar and lunar returns and gives detailed instructions in their calculation and application. The author discusses the tropical and sidereal zodiacs, explaining their origins and relative merits, and the phenomenon of the Precession of the Equinoxes in detail. A mass of worked examples backs up the theoretical side of the work, clarifying the several techniques involved.

John Filbey is a former tutor in computation and method for the Faculty of Astrological Studies and was also the Chairman of its examining board. In 1977 he was awarded the Fellowship of the Faculty in recognition of his services. He is also a member of the Astrological Association and author of NATAL CHARTING, THE ASTROLOGER'S COMPANION and ASTRONOMY FOR ASTROLOGERS.
