Cosmic Indifference and Literary Strategies in H. P. Lovecraft's Fiction Dominik Kruczinski, 2025-11-05 Master s Thesis from the year 2025 in the subject American Studies Literature grade 1 3 University of Duisburg Essen Department of Anglophone Studies course North America Studies language English abstract This following study focusses on two of Lovecraft s most conceptually rich and formally distinct stories The Call of Cthulhu 1926 and The Colour out of Space 1927 While both are ideal examples of his vision of a universe governed by cosmic indifference they contrast in structure setting and narrative technique The narrative of The Call of Cthulhu is characterized by a multi layered collection of fragmented reports and testimonies which sketch the discovery of a reality that is impossible to comprehend The Colour out of Space by contrast leads the reader through the slow erosion of perception and coherence within a rural landscape where horror manifests as an all surrounding force In both texts fear is enacted through narrative form structural disintegration linguistic failure and the gradual collapse of meaning The chosen investigative focus will lay on how H P Lovecraft narratively constructs cosmic indifference and to what extent this method can be understood as a literary representation of Naturalist and Sublime ideologies These aspects combined are theorized to be the core of what Lovecraft s idea of Cosmicism refers to The main aim is to explore the mechanisms through which his fiction produces fear by utilizing a unique narrative design stylistic choices and aesthetic devices Horror in this reading is not just regarded as pure transfer of content characterized by symbolisms or emotional effects The analysis of his fiction will present how fear is deliberately built into the framework of Lovecraft's storytelling To that end the study considers two literary traditions to be the most influential in that regard Naturalism with its emphasis on determinism material limits and the destruction of agency and the philosophical Sublime which covers disorientation excess and the collapse of comprehension These frameworks offer a lens through which Lovecraft's narrative techniques can be read not just as fancy stylistic choices but as structural strategies that perform ontological conflicts
