What Is an Emotion? William James, 2017-06-13 I should say first of all that the only emotions I propose expressly to consider here are those that have a distinct bodily expression That there are feelings of pleasure and displeasure of interest and excitement bound up with mental operations but having no obvious bodily expression for their consequence would I suppose be held true by most readers Certain arrangements of sounds of lines of colours are agreeable and others the reverse without the degree of the feeling being sufficient to quicken the pulse or breathing or to prompt to movements of either the body or the face Certain sequences of ideas charm us as much as others tire us It is a real intellectual delight to get a problem solved and a real intellectual torment to have to leave it unfinished The first set of examples the sounds lines and colours are either bodily sensations or the images of such The second set seem to depend on processes in the ideational centres exclusively Taken together they appear to prove that there are pleasures and pains inherent in certain forms of nerve action as such wherever that action occur The case of these feelings we will at present leave entirely aside and confine our attention to the more complicated cases in which a wave of bodily disturbance of some kind accompanies the perception of the interesting sights or sounds or the passage of the exciting train of ideas Surprise curiosity rapture fear anger lust greed and the like become then the names of the mental states with which the person is possessed The bodily disturbances are said to be the manifestation of these several emotions their expression or natural language and these emotions themselves being so strongly characterized both from within and without may be called the standard emotions William James

Researching with Feeling Caroline Clarke, Mike Broussine, Linda Watts, 2014-10-10 Why should researchers be interested in their feelings and emotions as they carry out research Emotion is what it is to exist to be human and is present in every sphere of our lives All activities are infused with emotion even those that are constructed as rational because rationality and emotionality are interpenetrated and entwined because all thinking is tinged with feeling and all feeling is tinged with thinking This book illuminates the emotional processes of doing social and organizational research and the implications of this for the outcomes of research With contributions from leading academics and research practitioners it addresses the significant issue of the sometimes intense emotional experiences involved in doing research and the implications it has for the theory and practice of social research By examining the nature of feelings and emotions it explores how we might understand researchers emotions and experiences and considers the often powerful feelings encountered in a variety of research contexts Topics discussed include power relations psycho social explanations of researcher emotions paradoxical relations with research participants and the sometimes disturbing data that is gained research supervision the politics of research gender publishing undergoing vivas and presenting at conferences This book will therefore be a valuable companion to researchers and research students from the start of their career onwards
