Dougherty,1991-08-31 The Forest Regeneration Manual presents state of the art information about current regeneration practices for southern pines in the United States Over 1 2 billion seedlings of five major species loblolly slash longleaf sand and shortleaf are planted each year In 22 chapters the Manual details fundamental steps in establishing successful young pine plantations regeneration planning including economic and legal aspects regeneration harvest methods propagation by seed and vegetative techniques bareroot and container seedling culturing in the nursery measures of seedling quality site potential environment associated vegetation soils matching species to sites site preparation mechanical and chemical methods fire fertilization seedling handling before planting planting practices and measures of regeneration success promoting early plantation growth and management of competing vegetation insects disease and wildlife Decision Support for Forest Management Annika Kangas,Jyrki Kangas,Mikko Kurttila,2008-03-26 The goal of Kangas Kangas and Kurttila s Decision Support for Forest Management is to provide students and researchers with a toolbox of methods for approaching the different planning situations that may arise in practice It draws together a wide range of methods used in planning forest management regimes and presents a systematic overview of current methodological approaches While earlier books concerning forest planning have tended to focus on linear programming economic aspects or specific multi criteria decision aid tools this book provides a much broader range of tools to meet a variety of planning situations The methods themselves cover a range of decision situations from cases involving single decision makers through group decision making to participatory planning They include traditional decision support tools from optimization to utility functions as well as methods that are just gaining ground in forest planning such as problem structuring methods and social choice theory Including examples which illustrate the application of each technique to specific management planning problems the book offers an invaluable resource for both researchers and advanced students specializing in management and planning issues relating to forestry Sustainable Forest Management Klaus von Gadow,Timo Pukkala,Margarida Tomé,2001-11-30 During its 200 year history the concept of sustainable forest ecosystem management has been the object of scientific and political discussion with varying degrees of intensity promoted with vehement fervour during periods of social or economic crisis and less intensely during periods of stability This volume which forms part of the book series Managing Forest Ecosystems presents state of the art contributions presented by 9 leading authors from North America Europe Australia and Southern Africa If technical knowledge is a constraint to the implementation of sustainable management this book contains a wealth of information which may be useful to students and practitioners alike The specific target readership includes company management the legal and policy environment and forestry administrators This book s unique feature is its holistic approach which includes ecological socio political and timber supply issues Managing Multiple Uses on National Forests, 1905-1995 John Fedkiw,1998 Miscellaneous Publication ,1985 Yield Models and Tables for Pinus Patula, Pinus Elliottii and Pinus Taeda in Zimbabwe K. Vanclay,1994 This book provides an introduction to growth modeling in mixed forests with emphasis on the tropics It is not intended as a how to manual with step by step instructions as there is no single best way to model such forests Rather it reviews different approaches highlighting their strengths and limitations It emphasizes empirical statistical models rather than physiological process type models because of the proven utility of the former in forest management Each chapter includes exercises that can be completed manually or on PC and spreadsheet The book will serve as a reference manual for practitioners and as a text for advanced level students taking courses in forest modeling Proceedings of Ilvessalo Symposium on National Forest Inventories Arne Nyssönen,Simo Poso,Johanna Rautala,1993 Forest Landowner ,2005 Energy from Biomass and Wastes ,1989 Sustainable Farm Forestry in the Tropics Stephen Robert Harrison,J. L. Herbohn,2001 There has been an increased awareness of the need to establish and maintain small scale forestry in tropical countries This is due to concerns over continued deforestation as well as the long term environmental and economic resources these plantations can contribute if managed successfully This book examines the constraints that limit the development of small scale forestry in tropical environments and how they can be overcome The authors first explain the background to their research and demonstrate how in contrast to industrial plantations small scale forestry has a wide variety of objectives including the production of fuelwood and a wide variety of non wood products and the protection of degraded watersheds and wildlife habitats They examine a broad range of socio economic topics under the broad themes of policy development market considerations the evolution of small scale forestry systems and timber and non wood benefits In developing countries for example small scale forestry is often regarded as a means of facilitating sustainable regional development As a result of seven years extensive research they have developed a strong policy line examining measures such as tax provisions and the targeting of subsidy and extension programs that can help promote the growth of non industrial forest industries The authors present an integrated socio economic analysis of the opportunities impediments and challenges to small scale forestry in the tropics As such this book will be required reading for scholars of environmental economics and science land resource economists and environmental forestry and resource managers Manitoba's Forest Industry,
