Trust A Woman:

Trust Women Rebecca Todd Peters, 2018-04-10 As women's reproductive rights are increasingly under attack a minister and ethicist weighs in on the abortion debate offering a stirring argument that the best arbiter of a woman's reproductive destiny is herself Cecile Richards former President of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America Here's a fact that we often ignore unplanned pregnancy and abortion are a normal part of women's reproductive lives Roughly one third of US women will have an abortion by age forty five and fifty to sixty percent of the women who have abortions were using birth control during the month they got pregnant Yet women who have abortions are routinely shamed and judged and safe and affordable access to abortion is under relentless assault with the most devastating impact on poor women and women of color Rebecca Todd Peters a Presbyterian minister and social ethicist argues that this shaming and judging reflects deep often unspoken patriarchal and racist assumptions about women and women's sexual activity These assumptions are at the heart of what she calls the justification framework which governs our public debate about abortion and disrupts our ability to have authentic public discussions about the health and well being of women and their families Abortion then isn't the social problem we should be focusing on The problem is our inability to trust women to act as rational capable responsible moral agents who must weigh the concrete moral question of what to do when they are pregnant or when there are problems during a pregnancy Ambitious in method and scope Trust Women skillfully interweaves political analysis sociology ancient and modern philosophy Christian tradition and medical history and grounds its analysis in the material reality of women's lives and their decisions about sexuality abortion and child bearing It ends with a powerful re-imagining of the moral contours of pre-natal life and suggests we recognize pregnancy as a time when a woman must assent again and again to an ethical relationship with the pre-nate

Feminist Democratic Representation Karen Celis, Sarah Childs, 2020-09-10 Popular consensus holds that if enough women are present in political institutions they will represent women's interests however such generalized assumptions are frequently queried on theoretical grounds and consistently shown to be conditional in practice In this book Karen Celis and Sarah Childs address women's poverty of political representation with a new feminist account of democratic representation Celis and Childs rethink and redesign representative institutions taking ideological and intersectional differences as their starting point Inclusive responsive and egalitarian representation for all women demands a new category of representatives in parliaments the affected representatives of women those who are epistemologically and experientially close to differently affected women Affected representatives advocate within political institutions and publicly hold elected representatives to account transforming representational effects deepening relationships between women and their democratic institutions
