

Being a typeface designed in 1968 by Adrian Frutiger for the Airport in Paris, it now best known as Frutiger. Focusing on legibility, Frutiger designed the font to be bold on lightbox signage in the airport. He blurred the letters in many tests to see which letters would remain legible.

The foundry D. Stempel AG commissioned a set of the typeface for Linotype machines. The full set now consists of 14 weights. There is also a newer Linotype version, part of the Platinum Series, that has slacker styles in italic and various weights.
