Nick There were always eyes on me It came with the job Which meant that I had to watch every single thing I did All the time I always had this huge part of myself buried so deep inside that I felt like a fraud most of the time Everything was going according to plan until him The stranger across the dark club pulled me in with his intense eyes I thought it was for the best that he left that night before I could find out who he was Then he showed back up in my life as my newly hired bodyguard Something I could easily tell he wasn't happy about But the more time he spent around me the more I could tell he liked me I didn't need his words to know that And the thing that sucked was that I started to really like him too Just when I started to think the only threat surrounding me was putting my heart and possibly career on the line I was reminded just how dangerous being a celebrity could get Jameson I didn't speak by choice But that didn't stop Mr Movie Star from understanding the deepest parts of me I wanted to hate this job I wanted to hate him Except the more I was around him the harder I fell for him Which was something I wouldn't allow myself to do I didn't deserve it Just focus on the job protect him I told myself that time and time again But he quickly became more than a job and though I knew he wasn't ready for what I wanted to give him I was willing to take what I could I was there to protect him There was one little problem though I had to keep him in the dark about how serious the threat really was And when the danger started closing in I feared I might not be able to save him Closed All Night Paul Morand,1925 Male Poets and the Agon of the Mother Hannah Baker

Saltmarsh,2019-04-23 A thoughtful exploration of male poets contributions to the literature of motherhood In the late 1950s the notion of a mother poem emerged during a confessional literary movement that freed poets to use personal psychosexual material about intimate topics such as parents childhood failed marriages children infidelity and mental illness In Male Poets and the Agon of the Mother Hannah Baker Saltmarsh argues that male poets have contributed to what we think of as the literature of motherhood that confessional and postconfessional modes have been formative in the way male poets have grappled with the stories of their mothers and how those stories reflect on the writers and their artistic identities Through careful readings of formative elegies and homages written by male poets of this time Saltmarsh explores how they engaged with femininity and feminine voices in the 1950s and 60s and sheds light on the inheritance of confessional motifs of gender and language as demonstrated by postconfessional writers responding to the rich subject matter of motherhood within the contexts of history myth and literature A foreword is provided by Jo Gill professor of twentieth century and American literature in the Department of English and associate dean for education at the University of Exeter After Confession Kate Sontag, David Graham, 2001-09 Explores how poems have been used as autobiographies throughout time The World's Great Confessions, 1929 The confessions of Jean Jacques Rousseau The autobiography of Benvenuto Cellini The confessions of an English opium eater by Thomas De Quincey The memoirs of Madame de Pompadour The autobiography of Benjamin Franklin The confessions of St Augustine In the Language of Roses BELINDA LAVENDER, 2024-06-09 In the Language of Roses captures the essence of love's bittersweet journey oscillating between moments of euphoria and despair Through concise prose it explores the joys of newfound romance and the depths of heartbreak offering solace to those who have experienced both Each page resonates with the fragrance of love's roses symbolizing both its beauty and its pain This collection serves as a reminder that love is a complex tapestry of emotions weaving together happiness and grief in equal measure With each word In the Language of Roses invites readers to embrace the full spectrum of love's expression
