

FUR TRADE ON THE UPPER MISSOURI RIVER

Fur Trade Posts

Fur companies made money by bartering trade goods to American Indians and white trappers for furs. The furs were shipped east and sold to make hats and coats. The fur trading posts were near the fur-bearing animals they depended on. They were located along major rivers to make shipping easy.

Buffalo robes or other furs made a fair trade for manufactured goods. From top (left to right): amber- or light-colored knives, brass or iron pipes, brass or iron pots, brass or iron kettles, brass or iron kettles, brass or iron pots. From lower left: glass trade beads, a hide coat, fur pipes (long white tubes), hawk bells, white fur clay pipes, open shells (note and sheath pronounced see doo), and metal pots.

"Slaughtered for the hide," by Paul Frenney and John Tavernier, Harper's Weekly 1874. Government policy, railroads, and overhunting decimated the great buffalo herds by the mid to late 1800s.

Larger fur trading forts operated year-round, serving as regional centers for a network of smaller, seasonal "posts" near American Indian encampments. Forts provided food and other supplies to the outlying posts and held their furs for shipment. Forts not only served as trading posts, but also as the place to come for news and fellowship.

The greatness of America is right under our feet The American past the people battles industry and homes can be found not only in libraries and museums but also in hundreds of archaeological sites that scientists investigate with great care These sites are not in distant lands accessible only by research scientists but nearby almost every locale possesses a parcel of land worthy of archaeological exploration Archaeology in America is the first resource that provides students researchers and anyone interested in their local history with a survey of the most important archaeological discoveries in North America Leading scholars most with an intimate knowledge of the area have written in depth essays on over 300 of the most important archaeological sites that explain the importance of the site the history of the people who left the artifacts and the nature of the ongoing research Archaeology in America divides its coverage into 8 regions the Arctic and Subarctic the Great Basin and Plateau the Great Plains and Rocky Mountains the Midwest the Northeast the Southeast the Southwest and the West Coast Each entry provides readers with an accessible overview of the archaeological site as well as books and articles for further research

The Fur Trade on the Upper Missouri, 1840-1865 John E. Sunder, 1993 By beginning where the standard works leave off and carrying the story up to its logical conclusion in 1865 this book fills a definite void in the history of the fur trade in the American West Set in the upper Missouri country which was bypassed by settlement until the 1860s it focuses primarily upon the St Louis firm of Pierre Chouteau Jr and Company usually known as the American Fur Company This is not the distorted and romanticized approach so typical of much of the literature on the earlier fur trade Drama is inherent but it is sound well conceived carefully documented history American Historical Review
