Avian Ecology and Conservation in an Urbanizing World John M. Marzluff, Reed Bowman, Roarke Donnelly, 2012-12-06 One of the most striking and persistent ways humans dominate Earth is by changing land cover as we settle a region Much of our ecological understanding about this process comes from studies of birds yet the existing literature is scattered mostly decades old and rarely synthesized or standardized The twenty seven contributions authored by leaders in the fields of avian and urban ecology present a unique summary of current research on birds in settled environments ranging from wildlands to exurban rural to urban Ecologists land managers wildlife managers evolutionary ecologists urban planners landscape architects and conservation biologists will find our information useful because we address the conservation and evolutionary implications of urban life from an ecological and planning perspective Graduate students in these fields also will find the volume to be a useful summary and synthesis of current research extant literature and prescriptions for future work All interested in human driven land cover changes will benefit from a perusal of this book because we present high altitude photographs of each study area

Urbanizing World United Nations Publications, 1996-01-01 Offers a review of conditions and trends in cities and other settlements around the world and of the urbanization process through which more than half the world's population will soon live in urban centres The book shows the positive and negative side of cities

Food systems for an urbanizing world Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, World Bank Group, 2018-08-29 Food Systems for an Urbanizing World is a joint report prepared by the World Bank and FAO. It aims to stimulate discussion and suggest pathways to support local and national governments and civil society and private sector actors in their efforts to improve the performance and capacity of food systems. The report describes the diversity and ever-changing nature of food systems with interlinked traditional, modern, and informal channels that respond to different market segments and different consumer preferences. It also underscores the importance of targeting support to the type of city and food system. The task is not an easy one. Data are weak and empirical analysis is weaker. As cities' engagement in urban food issues is relatively new, the institutions' governance mechanisms and capacities needed for effective design, implementation, and delivery of this agenda must be strengthened. Finding effective ways to prioritize, mobilize, and coordinate contributions from multiple sectors will be essential for achieving food system goals.

Environmental Problems in an Urbanizing World Jorge Enrique Hardoy, Diana Mitlin, David Satterthwaite, 2001. Updated and much expanded edition of the authors' 1992 classic Environmental Problems in Third World Cities. Comprehensive account of the health and life-threatening environmental conditions in which a growing proportion of the world's people live. Ideal as a textbook and for professionals and interested general readers. 1st edition widely adopted on urban geography, development studies, and environmental courses. Most of the world's urban population and most of the large and rapidly growing cities are in developing countries. Often poorly governed, their conditions produce millions of preventable deaths and extensive disease. This book describes these cities' environmental problems and how they affect health, local ecosystems, and global cycles. It analyzes the causes of the failure of governments to supply clean water and implement existing measures or land-owning structures that marginalize the poor. It also highlights the innovative ways in which problems are being tackled, showing solutions are available and the action needed by cities, local governments, and community organizations.

Environmental Problems in an Urbanizing World Jorge E. Hardoy, Diana Mitlin, David Satterthwaite, 2013-11-05. New edition of Environmental Problems in Third World Cities. Cities in Africa, Asia, and Latin America contain some of the world's most life and health-threatening human environments. Environment-related diseases and injuries cause millions of preventable deaths each year. In many squatter settlements, children are 40 to 50 times more likely to die before the age of five than they would be in Europe or North America, and most such deaths are environment-related. Many cities also cause serious environmental degradation to their surroundings and increasingly contribute to global warming. This updated and much expanded edition of the classic Environmental Problems in Third World Cities describes environmental problems and their effect on human health, local ecosystems, and global cycles. It points to the political causes that underpin many of these problems, including ineffective, unaccountable governments and aid agencies' reluctance to work with the urban poor. It also highlights innovative solutions such as high-quality, low-cost homes and neighbourhoods developed by urban poor groups working with local, non-governmental organizations. Local Agenda 21s developed by municipal governments in partnership with community organizations In their analysis the authors show that cities can meet sustainable development goals There are practical affordable solutions to their environmental problems but most of these depend on more competent and accountable city governments and on more support for low income households and their organizations The book also outlines the changes needed international aid agencies to support this PRAISE FOR THE FIRST EDITION It s rare to encounter a work as authoritative and accessible as this It is a mine of useful information from cities in every corner of the Third World which does not shy away from the immensity of the problems but says as much about the solutions to them as about the problems themselves Jonathon Porritt Well written and very accessible The Geographical Journal Of value to students teachers practitioners policy makers and aid agencies Third World Planning Review A valuable resource for understanding the underlying problems this book offers practical alternatives Cities International An Urbanizing World Martin Bockerhoff,2000 Urban Empires Edward Glaeser,Karima Kourtit,Peter Nijkamp,2020 We live in the urban century Cities all over the world in both developing and developed countries display complex evolutionary patterns Urban Empires Cities as Global Rulers in the New Urban World charts the backgrounds mechanisms drivers and consequences of these radical changes in our contemporary systems from a global perspective and analyses the dominant position of modern cities in the New Urban World This volume takes a broad perspective on the drastic role change of large cities in our global network society This book works to provide advanced analytical contributions from both a theoretical and applied perspective to the competitive profile of urban agglomerations in a globalizing world It traces and investigates the economic and political drivers of network cities in a global context and explores the governance challenges presented by mega cities It also works to identify and map out the new geography of the emerging urban century With contributions from well known scholars from around the world Urban Empires serves as a touchstone for exploring the scientific and policy needs of cities as the new global power centers which will of use to both students and professionals Controlling the Capital Tom Goodfellow,David Jackman,2023 This edited volume presents a cross regional comparative study of the role of capital cities and urbanization in the rise of authoritarianism It explores the multiple ways in which authoritarian regimes have been attempting to build and sustain long term dominance drawing on six diverse case studies from Africa and Asia Environmental Problems in an Urbanizing World Jorge Enrique Hardoy,Diana Mitlin,David Satterthwaite,2001 Updated and much expanded edition of the authors 1992 classic Environmental Problems in Third World Cities Comprehensive account of the health and life threatening environmental conditions in which a growing proportion of the world s people live Ideal as a textbook and for professionals and interested general readers 1st edition widely adopted on urban geography development studies environmental courses Most of the world s urban population and most of the large and rapidly growing cities are in developing countries Often poorly governed their conditions produce millions of preventable deaths and extensive disease This book describes these cities environmental problems and how they affect health local over In a two volume series Mattei Dogan and John D Kasarda have presented what surely is the most representative and scholarly collection of articles on world urbanization Easily read by scholar and student alike and all those who read this work will be well informed in the socio cultural changes being generated and sometimes festered by the development of an increasingly global urban political economic system Journal of Developing Societies A major contribution that both addresses the roles that giant cities play worldwide and provides useful detailed analysis of individual mega cities Both the breadth and depth of analysis are impressive as one would expect from the list of distinguished contributors The Metropolis Era would be of interest to all urban scholars Those with a more applied orientation such as scholars in urban and regional planning and schools of public affairs should also welcome the publication of these volumes W Parker Frisbie University of Texas Austin Libraries supporting programs in urban studies urban planning and comparative urbanization will need these two volumes in their collections One special feature of the second volume is that many of the essays have been prepared by specialists or coauthors who live in and study the cities whose problems they analyze which gives the essays more credibility Choice Needless to say these two volumes will be of universal interest to municipal officials of large cities who daily face the challenge of providing their citizens with services and amenities of incredible breadth and complexity Further they will find a ready audience among scholars and students of urban life And last but not least citizens who live in megalopolises as well as in small urban settlements and who might wish to know how other cities are coping with meeting the ever increasing needs of their ever growing population will find the books a source of stimulating information Planning and Administration The main virtue of this collection and it is an important one is that it substantively represents Third World Asian African and Latin American cities and communist bloc countries in addition to the West Contemporary Sociology Anyone interested in learning about the development of the world s largest cities and regions from an individual and comparative perspective will want to take a look at Dogan and Kasarda s two volume assessment of The Metropolis Era A World of Giant Cities Volume 1 and Mega Cities Volume 2 Cities The best global overview of urbanization available at this time Future Survey In terms of facts and ideas per dollar these volumes are a bargain They offer a substantive information about some of the world s giant cities and provocative suggestions regarding the ways urbanists might profitably think about such places individually and comparatively An international marketplace of ideas about cities and metropolitan areas is long overdue The editors are t be congratulated on a major and pioneering contribution to the development of such a marketplace and for allowing contributions latitude in selecting material appropriate to their cities and their perspectives Journal of Regional Science Well done Brings to the giant cities an abundance of information and reflections which are overall a contribution of great value in understanding urban affairs as well as contemporary social evolution This large work is without a doubt the best of its genre that is found on the market It has been put together well and unites an enormous mass of information and ideas on urban development Revue Francaise de Science Politique translated from the French These are remarkable volumes well organised thoughtful and informative seldom theoretical never boring easy to read and thought provoking Every chapter is somewhat different and has something new to say The ills and strengths of large cities are surveyed and analysed with lucidity this large work is of exceptional value and worth reading carefully Jean Gottmann in Town Planning Review A major contribution to the literature The overall impact of the books is an extremely challenging one they deserve to be read widely Urban Studies achieve s a breakthrough in analyzing and discussing urban problems within a cross cultural worldwide approach of collections of this kind this one is both more ambitious and more successful than most Given the direction in which urbanists and the world s cities are moving this book is helpful for sorting through issues with which we will be dealing more frequently Environment and Planning It is an interesting compilation with very much of value Habitat International given the concentration of information in these two volumes they will be an important source of information for students especially and to a lesser extent for municipal officials They will therefore constitute an important reference work for all types of students of urban life in large cities Canadian Journal of Latin Kasarda writes with authority and interest The individual city studies that comprise volume II are useful surveys of contemporary urban problems The Annals of Regional Science it is welcome to have comparative and up to date material on the common problems of large cities The value of these two volumes lies in collecting together disparate material on these large cities International Journal
