and Language Teaching Jacqueline Evers-Vermeul,Elena Tribushinina,2017-03-06 Although usage based approaches have been successfully applied to the study of both first and second language acquisition to monolingual and bilingual development and to naturalistic and instructed settings it is not common to consider these different kinds of acquisition in tandem The present volume takes an integrative approach and shows that usage based theories provide a much needed unified framework for the study of first second and foreign language acquisition in monolingual and bilingual contexts The contributions target the acquisition of a wide range of linguistic phenomena and critically assess the applicability and explanatory power of the usage based paradigm The book also systematically examines a range of cognitive and linguistic factors involved in the process of language development and relates relevant findings to language teaching Finally this volume contributes to the assessment and refinement of empirical methods currently employed in usage based acquisition research This book is of interest to scholars of language acquisition language pedagogy developmental psychology as well as Cognitive Linguistics and Construction Grammar   Cognitive Developmente and the Acquisition of Language Cognitive development and the acquisition of language,1973   Experimental Methods in Language Acquisition Research Elma Blom,Sharon Unsworth,2010 Experimental Methods in Language Acquisition Research provides students and researchers interested in language acquisition with comprehensible and practical information on the most frequently used methods in language acquisition research It includes contributions on first and child adult second language learners language impaired children and on the acquisition of both spoken and signed language Part I discusses specific experimental methods explaining the rationale behind each one and providing an overview of potential participants the procedure and data analysis as well as advantages and disadvantages and dos and don ts Part II focuses on comparisons across groups addressing the theoretical applied and methodological issues involved in such comparative work This book will not only be of use to advanced undergraduate and postgraduate students but also to any scholars wishing to learn more about a particular research method It is suitable as a textbook in postgraduate programs in the fields of linguistics education and psychology

A First Language Roger Brown,1973 For many years Roger Brown and his colleagues have studied the developing language of pre school children the language that ultimately will permit them to understand themselves and the world around them This longitudinal research project records the conversational performances of three children studying both semantic and grammatical aspects of their language development These core findings are related to recent work in psychology and linguistics and especially to studies of the acquisition of languages other than English including Finnish German Korean and Samoan Roger Brown has written the most exhaustive and searching analysis yet undertaken of the early stages of grammatical constructions and the meanings they convey The five stages of linguistic development Brown establishes are measured not by chronological age since children vary greatly in the speed at which their speech develops but by mean length of utterance This volume treats the first two stages Stage I is the threshold of syntax when children begin to combine words to make sentences These sentences Brown shows are always limited to the same small set of semantic relations nomination recurrence disappearance attribution possession agency and a few others Stage II is concerned with the modulations of basic structural meanings modulations for number time aspect specificity through the gradual acquisition of grammatical morphemes such as inflections prepositions articles and case markers Fourteen morphemes are studied in depth and it is shown that the order of their acquisition is almost identical across children and is predicted by their relative semantic and grammatical complexity It is ultimately the intent of this work to focus on the nature and development of knowledge knowledge concerning grammar and the meanings coded by grammar knowledge inferred from performance from sentences and the settings in which they are spoken and from signs of comprehension or incomprehension of sentences

First Language Acquisition Eve V. Clark,2009-01-22 Babies are not born talking they learn language starting immediately from birth How does this process take place When do children master the skills needed for using language successfully What stages do they go through as they learn to understand and talk Do the languages they learn affect the way they think This edition of Eve Clark s highly successful textbook focuses on children s acquisition of a first language the stages of development they go through and how they use language as they learn It reports on recent findings in each area covered includes a completely new chapter on the acquisition of two languages and shows how speech to children differs by social class Skilfully integrating actual data with coverage of current theories and debates it is an essential guide to studying language acquisition for those working in linguistics developmental psychology and cognitive science The Acquisition of Creole Languages Dany Adone,2012-06-28 The first study into how children acquire Creoles as their first language in the absence of a conventional language model Language Acquisition in Deaf Children Britta Wirth,2006-04-14 Seminar paper from the year 2005 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Linguistics grade 1 7 Ruhr University of Bochum English Department course Child Language Acquisition language English abstract Language acquisition has been studied for a long time but it is not completely understood yet Charles Darwin may have been the first to examine the development of a first language and he assumed that humans have an instinct to learn language Later on this idea was replaced by the notion that the acquisition of language is a sociocultural phenomenon In the early 1960s the linguist Chomsky presented a new explanation he said that children learn a language in the same way for example as they learn to walk upright because it is part of their nature and not because it is a form of their culture Thus language acquisition has a natural course of development 1If this theory is absolutely right or not is still being argued but shall not be the prior topic of this paper This work shall examine what happens if children are hearing impaired Are they able to follow the usual process of language acquisition or not In order to assess the consequences of language acquisition affected by physical disability one has to consider a general process of language development first There are various factors which have an influence on a child s process of language acquisition How large the impact of a specific factor is varies from theory to theory Nevertheless linguists agree that the grammatical structure the possible innate language acquisition mechanisms or biases as well as the biological or cognitive maturational factors and the nature of the language input to the child and the social context in which it takes place influence a child s language development No matter which factor has the most impressive impact on a child s speech progress by the age of four years he or she usually has a good command of the basic vocabulary syntax and phonology This language proficiency is found in all healthy children all over the world Cognitive Development and the acquisition of language ,1971 Language and the Study of Language William Dwight Whitney,1910 Histories of American schools for the deaf, 1817-1893, ed. by E.A.
