Women s Flight Training Detachment Those who trained at Municipal Airport had many hardships that future classes did not encounter They were not given the same military privileges as the men and had to pay their own way to the training facilities They were required to have at least 200 hours of flying time and had to pay all of their own expenses while training Some were trained by instructors who had less experience flying than they had Quite a few books have been written about the WASP in Sweetwater Texas but very few about the Houston group They were known as the 319th AAFWFTD and were not named WASP until August of 1943 My job was to keep up with their flying time to submit reports to the government for payment My office was called The Doghouse and was a glass building sitting near the runway I was completely in awe thinking what these ladies had to go through in order to serve their country They have since been recognized by the military but it took many years to obtain that status
