Postal and Delivery Services Michael A. Crew, Paul R. Kleindorfer, 2013-12-01 When Postmaster General Creswell penned his concern about the impact of electronic diversion on his postal organization the year was 1872 General Creswell it turned out fretted unnecessarily Facsimile did not achieve commercial viability until roughly a century after his tenure as Postmaster General and today that technology is fading rapidly from the communication scene Moreover it never appears to have significantly affected physical letter volumes However if General Creswell were leading a major postal organization today he likely would feel threatened by the potential of Internet communication to cause electronic diversion of physical mail Should recent technology developments cause the oft predicted but so far incorrect inflection point that would mark the beginning of declining mail volumes the implications from a management standpoint will be profound The relatively fixed nature of postal costs suggest that volume declines must be offset though improved productivity reduced cost of inputs revenue from new products that share common costs or reduced level of universal service

Real Options and the Costs of the Local Telecommunications Network Nicholas Economides,2008

The Telecommunications Act of 1996 invites entry in the local telecommunications networks whereby entrants will lease parts of the network unbundled network elements from incumbents at cost plus reasonable profit A crucial question in the implementation of the Act is the appropriate measure of cost This paper examines the economic principles on which the cost calculation should be based I conclude that the appropriate measure of cost maximizing allocative productive and dynamic efficiency is forward looking economic cost and not the historical accounting or embedded cost of the incumbent s network In calculating costs demand and supply uncertainty as well as the asymmetric position of incumbents and entrants should be taken into account Close examination of the issue of uncertainty in the local telecommunications network reveals that i for most unbundled network elements there is little demand uncertainty and ii that those elements that face significant uncertainty do not have sunk value Thus the incumbent does not face higher expected cost by investing Moreover the rewards of the incumbent can be higher because buyers prefer to buy services from the owner of the network Finally strategic considerations in oligopolistic interaction are likely to dominate any uncertainty considerations and will increase the incentive of incumbents to invest
