to make progress investigating the suspected murder of two children whose remains buried decades ago are discovered within the grounds of an old Teacher Training College Bennett a single immaculately dressed northern art collecting copper is a stickler for punctuality and good manners a man with a keen eye for the ladies Waking to find that he is suffering from Bell's Palsy comes as a great shock as vanity and partial facial paralysis are not good bed fellows DS Owen his right hand man and DS Liz Graydon new to the Harrogate Force are allocated one case each under Cyril's watchful eye The investigations lead Cyril to the Cote d'Azur whilst at the same time the number of mustard gas victims begins to grow All victims are from the same profession and each is attacked in the same calculated way Human error improving technology good Forensic evidence mixed with Bennett's gut feelings are shaken into an effective cocktail for solving crime Sadly however we know only too well that the criminal world always has two sides the face that we see and the one that remains eclipsed the umbra and penumbra Sometimes one masks the other but more often than not it is deliberately hidden Good conceals bad the truth the lie we are usually so anxious to discover the one we seek that we fail to look further Is this a failing of human nature
