The Democratic Potential Of Charter Schools:

The Democratic Potential of Charter Schools Stacy Smith, 2001 Annotation Since the inception of charter school reform in the U S in the early 1990s its proponents and opponents have emphasized its privatizing and market oriented approach Smith education Bates College Lewiston Maine argues that charter schools also provide democratic opportunities for public education such as equalized and expanded choice inclusive decision making and localized accountability A case study of the Winthrop Academy charter high school in Massachusetts investigates how the ideals of deliberative democracy are carried out in the practice of civic education For policy makers and readers with an interest in education reform Annotation c Book News Inc Portland OR booknews com

Pluralist Publics in Market Driven Education Ruth Boyask, 2020-06-11 Pluralist Publics in Market Driven Education opens a conversation on the nature of the public in education systems weary from market driven educational reform Ruth Boyask observes the characteristic of publicness within contemporary education settings a characteristic defined by tools from public sphere and democratic education theory Boyask s investigations of publicness in educational sites are founded in conceptualising public education as pluralist unbounded and conditional These concepts of the public are important for ongoing and future debate on public education The settings Boyask examines are different in structure function and location yet each demonstrates the push and pull between market relations including competition efficiency and productivity and the desire for social equality and democracy in education Examples of educational settings are drawn broadly from an Anglo American imaginary that has taken hold in educational systems transnationally with detailed observation from three research studies of education policy enactment in England The research studies including research on curriculum reform in a private democratic school privatisation of regional educational services and governance in English private schools provide contexts for examining public accountability public service and the public good as they relate to a reconceptualised public education Boyask s argument is that by opening a conversation about the nature of the public within these sites we bring them into the spheres of a pluralist public education They become open to public scrutiny and through their debate arise new ideas for challenging market driven restrictions to contemporary public education

(Im)Possibilities for Democracy in an All-charter School District Amanda Lu, 2023

This dissertation examines sociopolitical phenomenon in the New Orleans all charter school system to make broader claims about how decentralization the dispersal of state power into smaller entities and privatization the involvement of private actors in providing public services alter the state that structures the society in which we live Every public school in New Orleans is a charter school Charter schools receive a mix of public and private funding are privately managed and governed and have operational autonomy As an extreme of decentralization and privatization New Orleans school system allows us to assess the social and political consequences of pursuing these types of reforms in how we provide public services to citizens in a democratic society While other research may interrogate charter schools in the contexts of markets opportunities for innovations or equity oriented policy interventions I instead focus on the ways that charter schools reconfigure the American state apparatus vis vis the destabilization of long standing public institutions the involvement of private contractors decentralized governance and the introduction of market based logics The New Orleans system was built on actions from the state that disproportionately harmed Black people and institutions destabilized Black communities and limited Black political power Previous research on the New Orleans system and market based school reforms allows me to conceptualize the school system as an event of mass disenfranchisement Dispossession Historically Black schools were disproportionately closed in the state takeover process dispossessing Black people of important social cultural and political institutions Buras 2011 Buras 2015 Ewing 2018 Dixson et al 2015 Duncan Shippey 2019 Exclusion Black people were systematically excluded from the founding and management of new charter schools opening in the post Katrina system Dixson Henry 2019 Henry 2021 Lay Lay 2022 Replacement Black teachers were fired en masse and replaced by a less experienced Whiter teacher labor force Choice policies and school closures have potentially facilitated the gentrification of Black neighborhoods Lincove et al 2017 Pearman Pearman Tompkins 2015 Restructuring Black political power has been diminished as the powers of the elected school board have been delegated to charter school boards with non elected board members that are not demographically representative of New Orleans Kipman 2011 DeBray et al 2014 Harris 2020 Bulkley et al 2021 Scott 2015 As one of my informants Pastor Brenda Square described to me I think in New Orleans we re back in 1900 when the early activists had to fight to get schools Everything we ve built has been taken from us and now here we are in 2022 Just as the Supreme Court decision is taking away the rights of women we have experienced our rights being taken away in terms of public education and government My research question in this dissertation is a result of thinking through the existing literature Pastor Square's reflections and an acknowledgement of people's agency to resist I ask the broader question What democratic possibilities exist in highly decentralized and privatized state arrangements In my first paper I examine political mobilization around school renamings in New Orleans I make a theoretical contribution to field theory by examining what motivates certain actors to mobilize around school names Strategic action fields Fligstein McAdam 2012 model arenas of sociopolitical action They are dynamic in nature but can also shift I conceptualize the transition to an all charter school system as a field shift Currently field theory lacks concepts linking successive fields and knowledge about how permanent structures of inequality such as race gender and class persist through fields I contribute the idea of a field remnant to help link successive fields and provide a mechanism in which racial inequality between fields is maintained In my second paper I interrogate the extremes of institutional power that charter autonomy can afford certain organizations through the case of Lusher Charter School After becoming a charter school in 2006 Lusher has developed exclusive admission and financial practices that have allowed it to provide a highly resourced educational experience for a White and wealthy subset of the New Orleans public school population The school's leadership and governing board also suppress uses of voice by the Lusher community when these practices or the authority of school leaders are questioned I find that charter autonomy allows Exit Loyalty and Voice Hirschman 1970 to be manipulated within the institution My findings on charter autonomy contribute to an ongoing and prescient policy conversation about the status of charter schools as publicly accountable institutions In my final paper I take a systems level view of democratic participation in the many spaces of education governance that exist in New Orleans decentralized school system Decentralization has been conceived as a potential avenue for localizing decision making and reinvigorating democratic spaces that a growing public bureaucracy has complicated However decentralization is often pursued in tandem with privatization I use the concept of Deweyan publics as a way to identify groups with similar policy interests I find that generally publics are absent in decision making around issues of public education in New Orleans especially in charter board meetings Though I observe publics can still be consequential they have new constraints and challenges Additionally the reform community in New Orleans can act as a powerful public committed to preserving aspects of the all charter system that limit the potential for democratic voice I urge for a conceptualization of localism that accounts for the democratic consequences of privatization Through this dissertation I contribute work that urges us to consider the democratic consequences of reforms that reconstruct the American state without preserving democratic institutions The progress of past generations is at stake and we can no longer think through narrow policy lenses that do not prioritize our society's democratic values and commitments It will always be generational work to strive for a better world but we can ensure that our future generations are given educational systems to improve and not to rebuild Black Educational

Charter Schools Thomas Zachariah Murphy, 2002 Education is a perennially vexing issue in American life What exactly is the best system for teaching Proponents of charter schools believe that competition is the key public schools will improve if they have to compete for students Charters themselves are public schools but ones run by any group accepting the challenge of improving student performance in return for fewer regulations and tight budget restrictions In short charter schools have defined focus and clear accountability Those opposing the charter movement though claim that charter schools are divisive and distract attention from public school needs Some politicians have shown approval of charter schools as evidenced by President George W Bush s bill for funding charter programs This book aims to clear up some of the questions around charter schools and can help answer the questions surrounding the future of the American education system

Charter Schools and the Law Preston Cary Green (III), Julie F. Mead, 2004 Parents Founding Charter Schools Patty Yancey, 2000 Parents Founding Charter Schools investigates the founding development and early operations of two start up parent run charter schools in neighboring urban areas in California Both schools were among the first 105 charters approved in the state and provide an up close and personal view of the early years of charter organizing The ethnographic case study method allows us to witness the impact of external and internal barriers to decentralization on the lives and relationships of charter parents teachers and administrators Also rendered visible are the connections between internal chaos after the schools are operational and decisions or compromises made by sponsors and charter founders during the early developmental stages of the organizations

Dream and the Public Schools Jennifer L. Hochschild, Nathan Scovronick, Nathan B. Scovronick, 2004-10-21 Examines desegregation school funding testing vouchers bilingual education multicultural education and ability grouping These seem to be separate problems but much of the contention over them comes down to the same thing an apparent conflict between policies designed to promote each student's ability to pursue success and those designed to insure the good of all students or the nation as a whole The authors show how policies to promote individual success too often benefit only those already privileged by race or class The book also examines issues such as creationism and afrocentrism School Choice and the Future of American Democracy Scott Franklin Abernathy, 2009-11-12 In School Choice and the Future of American Democracy Scott Franklin Abernathy shows what is lost in the school choice debate Abernathy looks at parents as citizens who exert power over the educational system through everything from their votes on school budgets to their membership on school boards Challenging the assumption that public schools will improve when confronted with market based reforms Abernathy examines the possibility that public schools will become more disconnected and isolated as civic life is privatized Scott Abernathy takes up big questions and provides answers grounded in the complex reality of policy and politics School Choice and the Future of American Democracy is a book written for those who understand that the world does not fit the simple explanations too often put forward Clarence Stone Professor Emeritus University of Maryland and Research Professor George Washington University Will school choice revive or eviscerate democratic processes and institutions Will it narrow or exacerbate the range of educational inequities This book takes several differently angled slices into these questions and draws intriguing answers Jeffrey R Henig Teachers College Columbia University and author of Rethinking School Choice Limits of the Market Metaphor Through extensive research and refreshingly impartial analysis Scott Abernathy probes how the use of market principles to reform public schools affects democratic citizenship Treating citizens first and foremost as customers he finds that threatens civic engagement and the well being of schools especially in the nation's neediest communities This thoughtful and balanced appraisal is must reading for those concerned about the future of American education and democracy Suzanne Mettler Alumni Associate Professor Syracuse University and author of Soldiers to Citizens The G I Bill and the Making of the Greatest Generation Scott Franklin Abernathy is Assistant Professor of Political Science University of Minnesota Education and the Mobility Turn Kalervo N Gulson, Colin Symes, 2018-12-18 The mobile turn in human geography sociology and cultural studies has resulted in a hitherto unparalleled focus on the critical role that mobility plays in conserving and regenerating society and culture In this instance mobility refers not just to the physical movement of goods and people's ideas and symbols it can also be analytically applied to the technologies used to facilitate their movement One such technology is education which has yet to fall under the purview of the mobility lens something that this collection endeavours to redress Its contributing authors drawn from Canada Australia the United States and the United Kingdom explore salient issues relating to education and mobility These include studies of the career implications for academics of moving across borders the impact of university study on prison populations policy mobility and the charter school movement affect theory and policy development in Canada educational advertising on Sydney trains and stations and the employment mobile approaches to track policy development and implementation One notable feature of the mobility turn is the willingness of its adoptees to explore innovative research methods Various demonstrating the efficacy and cogency of autoethnography affect theory textual ethnography and human geography for a mobility empowered education analytics this collection is no exception This book was originally published as a special issue of Critical Studies in Education Schooling in the Public Sphere Ann Marie Allen, 2005 Rediscovering the Democratic Purposes of Education Lorraine McDonnell, P. Michael Timpane, Roger W. Benjamin, 2000 Why do America's public schools seem unable to meet today's social challenges As competing interest groups vie over issues like funding and curricula we seem to have lost sight of the democratic purposes originally intended for public education Public schools were envisioned by the Founders as democratically run institutions for instilling civic values but today's education system seems more concerned with producing good employees than good citizens Meanwhile our country's diversity has eroded consensus about citizenship and the professionalization of educators has diminished public involvement in schools This volume seeks to demonstrate that the democratic purposes of education are not outmoded ideas but can continue to be driving forces in public education Nine original articles by some of today's leading education theorists cut a broad swath across the political spectrum to examine how those democratic purposes might be redefined and revived It both establishes the intellectual foundation for revitalizing American schools and offers concrete ideas for how the educational process can be made more democratic The authors make a case for better empirical research about the politics of education in order to both reconnect schools to their communities and help educators instill citizenship An initial series of articles reexamines the original premise of American education as articulated by important thinkers like Jefferson and Dewey A second group identifies flaws in how schools are currently governed and offers models for change A final section analyzes the value conflicts posed by the twin strands of democratic socialization and governance and their implications for education policy Spanning philosophy history sociology and political science this book brings together the best current thinking about the specifics of education policy vouchers charter schools national testing and about the role of deliberation in a democracy It offers a cogent alternative to the exchange paradigm and shows how much more needs to be understood about an issue so vital to America's future Philosophy of Education Philosophy of Education Society (U.S.), 2006 American Book Publishing Record R.R.
