

How recruiters evaluate resumes: key findings

1.

Recruiters are subjective. Recruiters often disagreed among themselves about whether candidates were suited for a job. The average level of agreement between the recruiters was roughly half-way between random and perfect agreement.

2.

Recruiters are inconsistent. When a recruiter was presented with the same resume twice, they could consistently identify unsuitable candidates. However, when a candidate was deemed suitable, recruiters were consistent only 40% of the time.

3.

Recruiters perform similarly to AI. AI demonstrated a similar level of consistency in assessing resumes compared to human recruiters.
