Stevens, 2016-12-21 While the excitement of battle lasts and we hear the roar of artillery and the shock of contending armies the terrible reality of the occasion hardly presents itself to our minds and it is only when we survey the bloody field strewn with the mangled lifeless remains of friend and foe or walk through the hospitals where the unfortunate victims of battle wither in the agony of their wounds that we realize the terrible nature of a great battle George Stevens served for three years as a regimental surgeon with General John Sedgwick's VI Corps Like most of the VI Corps men Stevens had great regard and affection for Uncle John and was devastated by his death at Spotsylvania Written immediately after the war Stevens' history of the corps is the most detailed account of Sedgwick's command and is full of excitement pathos horror and humor Every memoir of the American Civil War provides us with another view of the catastrophe that changed the country forever

perhaps soon to be called out to meet in deadly strife an enemy whose prestige for valor was already too well established Were we to return to the friends from whom we had just parted bearing the chaplet of victory or were we to find a last resting place on some field of the south never again to meet with wife or sister father or mother Four years have passed and those doubts have been solved Many of those brave men have gone to their long rest We are delighted to publish this classic book as part of our extensive Classic Library collection Many of the books in our collection have been out of print for decades and therefore have not been accessible to the general public The aim of our publishing program is to facilitate rapid access to this vast reservoir of literature and our view is that this is a significant literary work which deserves to be brought back into print after many decades The contents of the vast majority of titles in the Classic Library have been scanned from the original works To ensure a high quality product each title has been meticulously hand curated by our staff Our philosophy has been guided by a desire to provide the reader with a book that is as close as possible to ownership of the original work We hope that you will enjoy this wonderful classic work and that for you it becomes an enriching experience
