G. Bhandarkar,2002

Description This book is the earliest pioneering effort at tracing the historical origins of such major religious systems as Vaisnavism and Saivism which with the passage of time came to dominate the Indian religious scene In contradistinction to atheistic religions such as Buddhism and Jainism there ran a counter movement of religious theism which as it were would culminate in the establishment of Bhagavata cult on the one hand and on the other would terminate in development various Saivite sects In order to show as to how Bhagavatism gave rise to a full fledged theistic theology of Vaisnavism Bhandarkar thoroughly examines the Narayaniya section of the Mahabharata Likewise does he deal with the development Saivite thought Even though the book was written at a time when Mohenjo daro excavations had not been carried out yet Bhandarkar has thoroughly examined the traces of Saivism in the Vedic hymns which ultimately would find its full expression in the Svetasvatara Upanisad Upon locating the sources of Vaisnavism and Saivism within the Vedic literature Bhandarkar thereby moves on in studying the sects and their theologies which both the Vaisnavites and Saivites gave rise to In addition to Vaisnavism and Saivism Bhandarkar also has made a thorough study of such minor sects as the Saktas Ganapatyas and Sauras The book contains a wealth of information and the study of it will be an enriching experience to those who are desirous of delving deep in the ancient culture and religions of India Vaisnavism, Saivism and minor religious systems R.
