Wind And Landscape:

Wind Power in View Martin Pasqualetti, Paul Gipe, Robert Righter, 2002-03-27 More than ever travelers are encountering a different sort of landscape one not only of nature but of technology Wind Power in View is the first authoritative discourse on the aesthetic impact of wind turbines on the landscape and what can be done about it It is a detailed and thoroughly illustrated discussion of the issue from several different perspectives The book also provides an overview of the status of wind energy at the dawn of the new millennium examines some of the ongoing battles and offers guidelines on minimizing its visual impact Taking examples from the United States Germany Denmark Great Britain and Sweden Wind Power in View is the first book to tackle the thorny land use questions raised by wind energy's hard won respectability What will be the future of wind energy Will it be welcomed as savior or will it be opposed as a new age intrusion on open space and landscape preservation These 11 essays international in nature and written by objective experts address landscape issues in creative original ways International focus with examples from Germany Denmark Great Britain Sweden and the United States The first book to tackle land use questions raised by wind energy's hard won respectability Addresses landscape issues in creative original ways

Landscape Philip Gilbert Hamerton, 1890 Wind and landscape Ian Livingstone, Andrew Warren, 2005 Wind Energy and Landscape C.F. Ratto, G. Solari, 1998-01-01 Arising from an international workshop these papers discuss aspects of wind turbines and the landscape Topics Harmonization of wind turbines with landscape Visual and audio impact of wind turbines Interference with telecommunication Impact of wind turbines on birds Real experiences in different countries Offshore wind farms Wind turbines in coastal and mountainous areas Wind turbines thunderstorms and lightning Economic and social impact of wind turbines Insurance policies regarding wind turbines Greater public acceptance of wind turbines

Landscape & Wind Park Jan Heersche, Liezelotte Nagtegaal, Martijn Franssen, 2006 Landscape Architecture, 2001 Wind Scapes Riva D. Black, 2016 Unlike the other natural elements like water wind has been little explored in architecture for its physical and sensory qualities Design considerations have been limited to mitigating damage or harnessing an energy source typically overlooking the experiential qualities of wind This thesis proposes that architecture has the potential to reveal the complex nature of this natural force by tracing the evolution of wind through studying the built constructions and their corresponding material landscapes What emerged was a methodology that uses architecture's key components of structure material and physical experience to reveal an invisible force The resulting design engages the shifting ground plane of an extreme wind scape to heighten a visitor's understanding of the evolution of the landscape over time and enhance a personal experience with wind as a force Through the eroding site of Rubjerg Knude on the northwest coast of Denmark architecture's stationary nature is used as a datum to measure and reveal the progression of the landscape both long term on a geological level as well as more immediately in its daily fluctuations This thesis attempts to establish a relationship between wind landscapes and the architecture placed within them The introduction of an intervention does not aim to maintain the environment as is but acknowledges that by inserting this intervention into the landscape it will inherently result in changes to the patterns of the site However the possibilities of how the environment will respond to human intervention is equally compelling and unforeseen
