Factors That Influence Food Choice In The Desert Locust Martha Kiarie, 2019-09-12

The Desert Locust Schistocerca gregaria Forskal is a major agricultural pest on farmland in the Sahel savannah of Africa. The desert locust can live in two remarkably different styles depending on the availability of food sources and the density of the local locust: either in large gregarious swarms or as solitary insects. Locusts belong to a large group of insects commonly referred to as grasshoppers. They are characterized by big hind legs used for jumping. Locusts are members of the family called Acrididae.

The aims of the study in this book were to find out if the age of the plant food material influences its palatability and preference by the Desert Locust Schistocerca gregaria. If the age of the locust S. gregaria influences its feeding activity in terms of food palatability and preference. If the above relationships influence performance in S. gregaria in terms of increases in body weight, fecundity, and survival. How the C/N ratio of the plant food materials influences food palatability and preference, hence performance in the locust S. gregaria.

Real-time evaluation of FAO's response to desert locust upsurge 2020-2021 - Phase I Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2020-12-14

Over the course of 2020, the most devastating Desert Locust upsurge of the past 25 years has spread across parts of the Middle East, the greater Horn of Africa, and southwest Asia. The upsurge poses an unprecedented risk to livelihoods and food security in some of the most food insecure countries in the world. FAO and its partners have mobilized more than USD 163 million since January 2020. The response includes three key pillars: 1) curbing the spread of desert locusts including surveillance; 2) safeguarding livelihoods and promoting recovery; and 3) coordination and preparedness of the rapid surge support. In this context, the FAO Office of Evaluation (OED) has been requested by the Director General to conduct a real-time evaluation (RTE) conducted across three phases spread over one year. Each phase will cover specific aspects of the response. Phase 1 focuses on leadership, management, and coordination of the response and was conducted from June to October 2020. The findings, conclusions, and recommendations of this phase 1 have been presented to a wide range of stakeholders and are developed in the Phase 1 report. Phase 2 focuses on results as well as management and operations at country level. Phase 3 will complete the RTE process, drawing lessons for future operations and FAO's work on desert locust in the region.
