American Theatre Planning Board Theatre Check List ,1969 The Planning and Construction of American Theatres William H. Birkmire,2016-02-16 From the INTRODUCTION We are informed that dramatic history in New York began more than a century and a half ago The first dramatic performance ever seen in America was given in this city during the last week in September 1732 The first playhouse was the Nassau Street Theatre on the east side of Nassau Street then called Kip between John Street and Maiden Lane It was a wooden structure and opened March 5 1750 Kean and Murray were the managers and the play for the first night was Richard III There were performances twice a week and the season lasted for five months This house gave way to a new one built in 1753 by Lewis and William Hallen the one a manager the other an actor but in a few years the new house was converted into a church for the use of the German Calvinists David Douglass built in 1761 a theatre at Nassau and Beekman streets where Temple Court now stands at which on November 26th of the same year Hamlet was presented for the first time in America The cost of this playhouse was 1625 The dimensions were 40 by 90 feet From 1761 to the present time what a contrast and advancement are perceptible The Madison Square Garden and the Metropolitan Opera House built within the last six years are of special prominence because of their magnitude as buildings and of the expenditure of enormous sums of money The Madison Square Garden in magnitude is the more important of the two It is the largest building in America devoted entirely to amusements and cost about 3 000 000 It occupies the entire block bounded by Madison and Fourth avenues Twenty sixth and Twenty seventh streets It is 465 feet long and 200 feet wide and its walls rise to a height of 65 feet Architecturally it is a magnificent structure because of the simplicity of the construction and the absence of trifling details in the ornamentation The style is in the Renaissance and the materials buff brick and terra cotta The roof is flat or nearly so but the sky lines are broken by a colonnade which rises above the roof at the Madison Avenue end and extends along either side for 100 feet by six open cupolas with semi spherical domes which rise above the colonnade by two towers at the Fourth Avenue corners and by a magnificent square tower which rises from the Twenty sixth Street side with its lines unbroken for 249 feet and then in a series of open cupolas decreasing in diameter on the smallest and topmost of which is posed a figure of Diana of heroic size the crown of whose head is 332 feet from the sidewalk At the Madison Avenue end and extending on either side for a distance of 150 feet there is an open arcade which covers the sidewalk and the roof of which rests upon pillars of polished granite and brick piers The top of the arcade is laid out as a promenade The main entrance to the building is at the Madison Avenue end through a triple doorway and above it is the most prominent feature of exterior decoration an elaborate arch in terra cotta set in relief into the wall
