Vandemarks Folly:

Vandemark's Folly Herbert Quick, 2024-11 Vandemark's Folly by Herbert Quick is a novel written in the early 20th century blending personal history with the broader story of American westward expansion. The novel is narrated by Jacobus Teunis Vandemark, known as J. T. Vandemark, who reflects on his experiences as the first settler in Vandemark Township, Iowa. Through his eyes, the reader is introduced to the trials and triumphs of pioneering life in the American Midwest during the 19th century. As the first to settle in a largely undeveloped area, Vandemark becomes the embodiment of the American pioneer spirit: determined, resilient, and driven by the hope of building a new life in the untamed wilderness. The novel captures his struggles against the land, the weather, and the isolation, as well as his efforts to forge a community from a sparse, untamed frontier. Through his memories, Vandemark also recounts the lives of other early settlers, their shared hardships, and the sense of camaraderie that arises in the face of adversity.

Vandemark's Folly Herbert Quick, 1922 is the history of a fictional town in Iowa as told by one of its first settlers. Jacob Vandemark was a hand on the Erie Canal who caught a breath now and then of the prairie winds and eventually allowed the current to carry him to Iowa. VanDemark's Folly HardPress, Quick Herbert 1861-1925, 2013-06. Vandemark's Folly Herbert Quick, 1922 Vandemark's Folly (Classic Reprint) Herbert Quick, 2015-07-11. Excerpt from Vandemark's Folly: The work of writing the history of this township, I mean Vandemark Township, Monterey County, State of Iowa, has been turned over to me. I have been asked to do this, I guess because I was the first settler in the township; it was named after me. I live on my own farm, the oldest farm operated by the original settler in this part of the country. I know the history of these thirty-six square miles of land, and also of the wonderful swarming of peoples which made the prairies over, and the agent of the Excelsior County History Company of Chicago, having heard of me as an authority on local history, has asked me to write this part of their new History of Monterey County, for which they are now canvassing for subscribers. I can never write this as it ought to be written, and for an old farmer with no learning to try to do it may seem impudent, but some time a great genius may come up who will put on paper the strange and splendid story of Iowa, of Monterey County, and of Vandemark Township, and when he does write this the greatest history ever written, he may find such adventures as mine of some use to him. Those who lived this history are already few in number, are fast passing away, and will soon be gone. I lived it, and so did my neighbors and old companions and friends. So here I begin. The above was my first introduction to this history, and just here, after I had written a nice fat pile of manuscript, this work came mighty close to coming to an end.
