Telecommunications In Canada:

Telecommunications in Canada Robert E. Babe, Richard Collins, 1990-01-01 This study provides Canada's first comprehensive integrated treatment of the emergence and development of key communication sectors telegraph telephones cable TV broadcasting communication satellites and electronic publishing By focusing on real institutions actual and frequently predatory business practices and law and regulatory policies in both historical and contemporary perspectives Babe helps demystify current communication issues Stressing the flexibility of communication technologies on the one hand and the element of corporate power on the other Babe reintroduces the principle of corporate governmental responsibility for communication outcomes a principle that has been largely drowned out by the shrill cries of Information Revolution

Telecommunications and Canada - Consultative Committee on the Implications of Telecommunications for Canadian Sovereignty Consultative Committee on the Implications of Telecommunications for Canadian Sovereignty, Telecommunications in Canada Steven Globerman, Deborah Carter, Fraser Institute (Vancouver, B.C.), 1988 From the back cover The telecommunications industry in several important and dramatic ways does not fit the stereotype of a service industry In particular it is a relatively capital intensive industry that has enjoyed well above average rates of productivity growth Technological changes affecting the industry in recent years have been marked and have spawned new communications activities such as cellular radio The employment growth generated in the industry has been associated with an increase in average educational levels rather than a significant deskilling that numerous observers of the service sector worry about The prospects are for continued performance along these lines However continued government restrictions on competition in the industry could thwart the realization of many of the benefits of productivity and technological change on both the supply and demand sides of the market

Telecom Nation Laurence B. Mussio, 2001-04-27 Laurence Mussio examines how federal and provincial public policy tried to keep pace with the diffusion of telecommunications consumer demand and a rising tide of technological innovation Telecommunications regulation struggled to maintain a balance between producer and consumer in an increasingly complex field and policy makers were compelled to defend the national interest in international telecommunications arrangements or by making far reaching decisions about transcontinental microwave systems and satellites By the late 1960s national policy makers had embraced the arrival of the computer especially once it began to be wired into Canada's communications infrastructure Telecom Nation explores the impact of the computer on government policy and the first attempts to build a national computer utility the beginnings of the Internet twenty five years before it became a reality Based primarily on the rich and largely untapped sources at the National Archives of Canada Cabinet records provincial archives and private sector repositories Telecom Nation provides an essential background to contemporary public policy issues by examining how governments reconciled technological change private enterprise consumer demand and the public good in communications It will be required reading for students and specialists interested in telecommunications public policy and technological change Telecommunications in Canada , National Strategic Planning and Practice Liaquat Hossain,2017-11-22 This title was first published in 2001 This text explores the relationship between telecommunications strategic planning process TSPP the organization and the environment for developing an understanding of the idea of a national TSPP NTSP in Thailand The overall aim is to explore an understanding of an NTSP by providing a detailed study of the strategic planning and practices of the Thai telecom regulators during the period from 1954 to 1996 It applies the strategic planning process principles to further the understanding of NTSP in Thailand By using the SPP framework the study develops a theoretical TSPP framework for analyzing the underlying TSPP strategies within the national telecom regulators in Thailand It also seeks to illustrate the limitations of the traditional strategic planning theory when applied to NTSP From a theoretical perspective this book illustrates that a lack of formalization and consensus in Thailand s NTSP is the fundamental backlog for the successful operation of its industry The Canada Year Book ,1992
