What she wasn't prepared for was the world outside the prison walls. When a controversial change in legislation is proposed, a chain of events is started that no one could have seen coming. As mysterious and supernatural events start to unfold, Boudreaux and her closest allies must work together to stop the unthinkable before it's too late. But how can they stop what they can't see and what many don't believe in.

The Auction Block Rex Beach, 2008-09-01 The boys like to see Dick trimmed; it's a matter of principle with them never to let him win a bet and they'd do anything for me. How much am I offered? Going, going.

The Bookman, 1915 Demonic Grounds Katherine McKittrick, In a long overdue contribution to geography and social theory, Katherine McKittrick offers a new and powerful interpretation of black women's geographic thought. In Canada, the Caribbean, and the United States, black women inhabit diasporic locations marked by the legacy of violence and slavery. Analyzing diverse literatures and material geographies, McKittrick reveals how human geographies are a result of racialized connections and how spaces that are fraught with limitation are underacknowledged but meaningful sites of political opposition. Demonic Grounds moves between past and present, archives and fiction, theory and everyday to focus on places negotiated by black women during and after the transatlantic slave trade. Specifically, the author addresses the geographic implications of slave auction blocks, Harriet Jacobs's attic, black Canada, and New France, as well as the conceptual spaces of feminism and Sylvia Wynter's philosophies. Central to McKittrick's argument are the ways in which black women are not passive recipients of their surroundings and how a sense of place relates to the struggle against domination. Ultimately, McKittrick argues these complex black geographies are alterable and may provide the opportunity for social and cultural change. Katherine McKittrick is assistant professor of women's studies at Queen's University.
