

BOOK REVIEW

Mearsheimer, John J. The Tragedy of Great Power Politics.
(New York; W. W. Norton and Company, 2001), PP 555.

Air Commodore Ghulam Mujaddid

John J. Mearsheimer is a renowned scholar of Political Science at the University of Chicago. His book "The Tragedy of Great Power Politics" is a seminal work on the nature, behaviour and conduct of great powers in the modern and post-modern international systems. He has based his research on the theory of "offensive realism". The theory has been propounded by Mearsheimer himself, and is essentially a structural realist theory. In order to test his propositions, Mearsheimer has taken the support of huge historical evidence on the behaviour of great powers since 1792 until end of the 20th century. He has divided his book in ten chapters.

The first chapter "Introduction", is actually an 'abstract' of his book, in which he explains the behaviour of great powers to assert that security competition and war cannot be purged away from the international system. Mearsheimer holds that any optimism regarding great power cooperation is unfounded, and the evidence of "perpetual peace" among great powers is minimal. The United States still maintains huge military presence in Europe and Northeast Asia. The European powers are still apprehensive of Germany, and the same is true in case of Northeast Asian powers like China and Russia about Japan. The possibility of clash between China and United States over Taiwan exists. Mearsheimer asserts that "the sad fact is that international politics has always been a ruthless and dangerous business, and it is likely to remain that way" (p.2). He contends that great powers are never satisfied with the distribution of power and always try to change it in their favour. Their desire for more power continues until a great power attains the status of a hegemon. He observes that "great powers are primed for offence" (p.3). They seek to gain power at the cost of other states. It is the structure of international system that forces them to act aggressively against each other. He aptly remarks:-
