

INTELLIGENCE TODAY AND TOMORROW

Spring 2014

Email: mark.galeotti@nyu.edu

Intelligence is arguably one of the most powerful and also problematic tools of the modern state, and one applied not just to foreign policy and security affairs, but also areas as varied as economic strategy and law enforcement. However, the modern world increasingly poses complex challenges to both intelligence and counter-intelligence, ranging from the over-abundance of data to the need to balance the needs of the state and the rights of the individual. Furthermore, not only do modern states outsource a growing share of their intelligence activities to private agencies, but it is also increasingly evident that businesses and non-governmental agencies have their own intelligence assets, even if rarely described or recognized as such.

This course will explore the evolution and dimensions of modern intelligence and counter-intelligence, such that students will develop an informed appreciation of the capabilities and limitations of intelligence and its impact on the modern world.

Course Information

FORMAT

This course is taught through 8 40/45-minute units scheduled in 4 90-minute blocks (with a brief break in between); these will be a mix of lecture and discussion, which means that students must make sure they have read the required reading beforehand, all of which will be available electronically. The expectation is that all students will attend every unit, have prepared adequately beforehand, and will engage in the debate and discussion within the class.

1. Introducing Intelligence
2. Collecting Intelligence
3. Analyzing Intelligence
4. Using Intelligence
5. Active Intelligence
6. Criminal Intelligence
7. Modern Intelligence
8. Future Intelligence

READINGS

All required reading will be made available electronically. A wide range of Further Reading is also provided as a guide to you both for interest and for your memo; some of these (asterisked) will also be available electronically.

ASSESSMENT

This course is assessed through writing an analytic memorandum, after the classes. Intelligence
