

Introduction: What is Democracy?

Democracy is a system of government where the people have the power to make decisions about their country or community. In a democracy, people can vote to choose leaders or even make laws directly. The word "democracy" comes from the Greek words demos (meaning "people") and kratos (meaning "power" or "rule").

There are two main types of democracy:

Direct Democracy: In this system, people vote directly on laws and decisions. Everyone has a say.

Representative Democracy: In this system, people choose leaders who will make decisions for them.

Democracy is based on some important ideas:

Equality: Everyone has the same rights to vote and participate.

Participation: People take part in making decisions.

Rule of Law: The government must follow laws, and those laws apply to everyone.

Find an example of a modern direct democracy (where people vote directly on laws and decisions, like Athens did). This could be a country, a region, or even a local government system.

Example: _____

Explain: How does this direct democracy work? What types of decisions do people vote on directly?
