Twenty Bosses:

Bosses, Machines, and Urban Voters John M. Allswang, 2019-12-01 Originally published in 1986 Political machines and the bosses who ran them are largely a relic of the nineteenth century A prominent feature in nineteenth century urban politics political machines mobilized urban voters by providing services in exchange for voters support of a party or candidate Allswang examines four machines and five urban bosses over the course of a century He argues that efforts to extract a meaningful general theory from the American experience of political machines are difficult given the particularity of each city s history A city s composition largely determined the character of its political machines Furthermore while political machines are often regarded as nondemocratic and corrupt Allswang discusses the strengths of the urban machine approach chief among those being its ability to organize voters around specific issues

Syndicate Women Chris M. Smith, 2019-07-02 In Syndicate Women sociologist Chris M Smith uncovers a unique historical puzzle women composed a substantial part of Chicago organized crime in the early 1900s but during Prohibition 1920 1933 when criminal opportunities increased and crime was most profitable women were largely excluded During the Prohibition era the markets for organized crime became less territorial and less specialized and criminal organizations were restructured to require relationships with crime bosses These processes began with and reproduced gender inequality The book places organized crime within a gender based theoretical framework while assessing patterns of relationships that have implications for non criminal and more general societal issues around gender As a work of criminology that draws on both historical methods and contemporary social network analysis Syndicate Women centers the women who have been erased from analyses of gender and crime and breathes new life into our understanding of the gender gap

30,000 Locked Out: The Great Strike of the Building Trades in Chicago James C. Beeks, 2022-09-04 James C Beeks work 30 000 Locked Out The Great Strike of the Building Trades in Chicago offers an incisive historical account rich in detail and context Through meticulous research this book presents a vivid portrayal of the tumultuous labor dispute that became a pivotal moment in the labor movements of the early 20th century Beeks prose is formidable stirring yet precise and he succeeds in placing readers at the very heart of the confrontation Due to DigiCat Publishing s efforts the work now graces modern shelves lending historical academicians and literary enthusiasts alike an opportunity to engage with this significant event within the sociopolitical tapestry of American history The literary style is both narrative in its accessibility and analytical in its depth underscoring the book s importance within its literary context James C Beeks brings to this book not only his expertise but a palpable passion for the documentation of labor history His interest likely stems from a profound understanding of the workers strife for rights and recognition This historical narrative could well be influenced by contemporary resonances with ongoing labor disputes and socioeconomic discussions making Beeks examination a timely reflection on past struggles His portrayal is not merely historical recounting it is a careful dissection of the dynamics of power solidarity and resistance Readers seeking to comprehend the complexities of labor relations or those interested in the historical progression of workers rights will find 30 000 Locked Out indispensable Beeks offers an essential read that elucidates the past while resonating with present day challenges faced by labor movements worldwide Whether you are an academic student or simply a lover of well drawn historical narratives this book comes highly recommended for its ability to illuminate the struggles that have shaped and continue to shape the fabric of the workforce
