

TYPES OF REINS

LOOP (CLOSED)

Closed reins are made from a continuous piece of leather or rope and help prevent the rider from dropping the reins. They are used in both English and Western riding.

SPLIT

Split reins are made from two long strips of leather, one attached to each side of the bit. They are primarily used in Western and trail riding because they prevent the reins from getting tangled in brush or the horse's feet.

DOUBLE

Double reins have both a set of snaffle reins and curb reins to give the rider more control over the horse. They are used with a double bridle that generally has a Pelham bit.

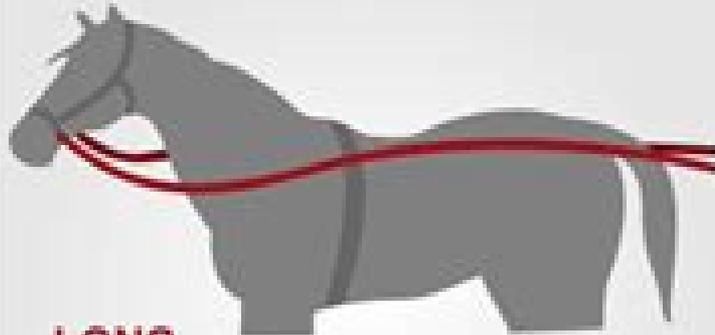

ROMEL

Rommel reins are generally used in Western riding. They are closed reins that have an attached quilt (whip) used for driving cattle.

DRAW (RUNNING)

Running or draw reins attach to the underside of the saddle then run through the bit to the rider's hands. They give the rider more leverage and more control over the horse.

LONG

Long reins are used when driving a cart or walking behind a horse. They generally pass through rings on a harness around the horse's body to keep them from getting tangled.

MECATE

Mecate reins are used with a special bitless bridle that is tied rather than buckled together. They are made from rope that is tied to create a loop rein and a long free end that can be used as a lead rope or longe line.
