When The Road Ends:

Where the Road Ends Binka Le Breton,2010-05-06 The colorful story of one couple s journey across the world to build their dream home in the heart of the Amazon In 1989 as their mid life crises approached concert pianist Binka Le Breton and her husband Robin an agricultural economist decided to uproot themselves from their home in Washington D C and start a new life in Brazil Where the Road Ends is their story of building a house a rainforest research center and a new dream Since then they ve learned how to work with the trees the animals the weather the local community and each other Their technology now ranges from the oxcart to the Internet and in 2000 they opened a rainforest conservation and research center that is visited by foreign researchers and Brazilian school children From meeting their resident cowboy Albertinho to beheading snakes to chauffeuring a local wedding the adventures described here are unparalleled This delightful memoir takes the armchair traveler deep into another world where matters of providing food and shelter can never be taken for granted Binka and Robin have embarked on an adventure that many readers only dream about transplanting themselves in a different country and learning often the hard way what it takes to survive and flourish A good read for armchair travelers Kirkus Reviews

Pamiri Lifeworlds Fiona Katherine Naeem,2025-11-07 Living through imperial border disputes resulting in the separation of many communities and families Pamiris find themselves surrounded by rupture both in memory and contemporary situations in this transborder mountainous region divided since 1895 by British and Russian imperial border demarcation This monograph drawing from ethnographic interviews with Pamiris from Gorno Badakhshon Autonomous Oblast GBAO Tajikistan collected between 2021 and 2023 investigates how Pamiris continue to respond to rupture using memories of past ruptures to position themselves within their own cartography of Pamir For some rupture takes the form of im mobility and a fear of coming too close to the border while others turn to creativity to make sense of the ruptures around them Through oral narrations and material artefacts Pamiris learn feel and recreate a Pamiri cultural identity which provides continuity in times of rupture helping younger generations to experience the interconnection of the lifeworld in which they find themselves and ultimately imagining Pamir through emotion and memory This monograph challenges the anthropological assumption that ruptures represent breaks in continuity arguing that materiality provides continuity in times of instability with cultural heritage giving Pamiris a way to position themselves in the uncertain present by way of the material turn In this way this monograph attempts to draft a Pamiri history of rupture challenging assumptions of global continuity and relocating historical narratives of the past century to Pamir by presenting Pamiri perspectives on rupture and examining how people remember and respond to times of redirection uncertainty and instability In doing so this monograph strengthens the growing focus in historical studies on non elite marginalised perspectives for example in the fields of Oral History Salvage Ethnography as well as the larger historical debates in the field of Subaltern Studies ultimately drafting a history of Pamir from a regional perspective The regional is understood here both spatially and temporally as an overarching perspective whereby in contrast to global approaches to space and time the regional represents part of an inward outward approach which is distinctive of the New Area Studies The regional is therefore understood as a perspective which while existing in relation but not necessarily tied to the geography of Pamir for example Pamiris living in diaspora in Russia or North America is in this case a Pamiri experience of being in the world Drawing from the experiences of Pamiri people articulated using Pamir languages this book locates such shifts in temporality on a community level examining how rupture has affected interconnection and understandings of space and time By shifting to a regional scale experiences from preconceived peripheries like Pamir are brought to the forefront highlighting at times the subjectivity of rupture and challenging the concept of the global epoch for the fact that when you live far from the political centres of nation states or at the vague edges of the mandala their ruptures lose the relevance a global epoch demands
