Gastroesophageal Reflux Disease

What is GERD?

The esophagus is the tube that carries food and liquid from the mouth to the stomach. The lower esophageal sphincter (LES) is a ring of muscle that acts as a valve between the esophagus and the stomach. When the LES relaxes, it allows food and liquid to pass from the esophagus into the stomach. When the LES contracts, it prevents stomach contents from flowing back up into the esophagus. In people with GERD, the LES does not contract properly, allowing stomach acid to flow back up into the esophagus. This can cause irritation and inflammation of the esophageal lining, which is the tissue that lines the inside of the esophagus. Over time, this can lead to complications such as esophagitis and Barrett's esophagus.

Esophageal lining with esophagitis

Esophagitis

Esophagitis is inflammation of the lining of the esophagus. It is caused by irritation of the esophageal lining, which can be due to acid reflux, infection, or a reaction to certain medications. The inflammation causes the lining to become red, swollen, and irritated. This can lead to symptoms such as heartburn, chest pain, and difficulty swallowing.

Esophageal lining with Barrett's esophagus

Barrett's esophagus

Barrett's esophagus is a condition in which the lining of the esophagus changes from normal squamous epithelium to a type of lining called columnar epithelium. This change is thought to be caused by chronic acid reflux. Barrett's esophagus is a precancerous condition, and it can lead to the development of esophageal cancer. It is important to monitor people with Barrett's esophagus closely for any changes in their symptoms or the appearance of their esophageal lining.

Taking control of GERD

- Eat a balanced diet with a low-fat, low-salt diet.
- Avoid alcohol, caffeine, and tobacco.
- Lose weight if you are overweight.
- Eat smaller meals more often.
- Do not lie down for at least 2-3 hours after eating.
- Avoid wearing tight-fitting clothing.
- Elevate the head of your bed.
- Avoid smoking and drinking alcohol.
- Avoid taking NSAIDs and aspirin.
- Avoid taking calcium supplements.
- Avoid taking iron supplements.
- Avoid taking certain medications.

Stomach acid

Stomach acid is a mixture of hydrochloric acid and other substances that help break down food in the stomach. It is produced by the stomach's gastric glands. In people with GERD, the stomach acid flows back up into the esophagus, causing irritation and inflammation of the esophageal lining.

Gastric gland

Hiatal hernia

Hiatal hernia and GERD

A hiatal hernia is a condition in which the stomach protrudes through the diaphragm. This can lead to GERD because the stomach is no longer properly supported, and the LES is more likely to relax, allowing stomach acid to flow back up into the esophagus.

Diet and medication

There are several ways to manage GERD, including diet and medication. A diet low in fat, sugar, and caffeine can help reduce symptoms. Medications such as proton pump inhibitors (PPIs) and H2 blockers can help reduce stomach acid production. It is important to talk to your doctor about the best treatment options for you.
