

Intimate Partner Violence vs. Domestic Violence

Intimate Partner Violence

Intimate Partner Violence includes any behaviors that one intimate partner (current or former) uses over another to establish power and control. These can include physical or sexual violence, but they do not always; they can be financial, emotional/psychological, cultural, spiritual, reproductive, or other controlling behaviors.

Child Survivors of Intimate Partner DV

Children are often accidentally or incidentally impacted by a parent experiencing Intimate Partner Domestic Violence. Our child advocate and therapist work with children whose primary issues/concerns stem from witnessing their parent go through Intimate Partner Domestic Violence.

Domestic Violence

- 1) For YWCA Spokane, we utilize the term domestic violence to refer to any situation where one partner in an intimate relationship tries to maintain power and control over the other person.
- 2) Legally, Domestic Violence applies to any two parties in the same household who commit crimes of physical harm, bodily injury, or assault; creating a fear that physical harm, bodily injury, pushing, shoving, slapping, punching, kicking, or assault will happen soon; sexual assault; or stalking.

Child Survivors of Domestic Violence

If the prominent concern is sexual assault and/or child maltreatment (particularly physical abuse), YWCA Spokane will refer these cases to Lutheran Community Services or Partners with Families and Children for support services. Depending on the nature and severity of the abuse, may also be a mandated report to Child Protective Services.

Please do not hesitate to call our Intimate Partner Domestic Violence Support Services at 509-789-9297 to see if our agency is right for your case, to make an appointment, or to simply speak to someone if you need support.

An Ecological Systems Approach to Understanding Intimate Partner Violence Outcomes Alison Marisa Pickover, 2017 The present study examined the influence of person level event level geographic and social factors on the maintenance of mental health conditions in women survivors of intimate partner violence IPV The influence of these factors on posttraumatic stress disorder PTSD depression and generalized anxiety disorder GAD was conceptualized used an ecological systems framework Main effects of 13 empirically supported predictor variables and interactive effects of race and racial ethnic make up of the neighborhood race and crime and crime and social support were examined Geographic information systems GIS technology was used to map neighborhood factors e g racial ethnic composition employment rate median income and crime Crime in the environment was mapped at address level and aggregated to precinct level allowing us to examine measurement effects In hierarchical regression analyses peritraumatic response to IPV longer elapsed time since IPV and sexual IPV were associated with IPV related PTSD Exposure to more adverse events longer elapsed time since IPV and sexual IPV were associated with depression Crime interacted with race to predict depression although the nature of the interactions differed as a function of crime measurement Precinct level crime interacted with social support to predict depression Sexual IPV and exposure to more adverse events were associated with GAD These findings underscore the role of maintenance factors from multiple systems in symptomatology among women IPV survivors They suggest that crime is a particularly relevant geographic factor impacting mental health Clinical and policy implications are discussed with attention to the utility of integrating GIS technology into future IPV and mental health related endeavors

Understanding Domestic Violence Rafael Art. Javier, William G. Herron, 2018-08-10 Understanding Domestic Violence not only highlights and reexamines the different challenges that we continue to face in effectively addressing issues of domestic violence but provides innovated approaches to interventions that are more in keeping with the complex nature of domestic violence This book provides a comprehensive and multifaceted examination of conditions and factors involved in domestic violence including psychological sociocultural sociopolitical and socioeconomic issues The authors look at domestic violence through the trauma lens and intersectionality to develop intervention strategies within that context Statistics and clinical examples from the field highlight unique culturally based issues related to domestic violence among Latino African American and Arab Muslim communities issues with woman perpetrators and violence in the LGBTQ community to name a few In the end Understanding Domestic Violence offers opportunities for the reader to engage in further discussion of the poignant issues discussed in the book with the invitation to become part of the solution

Understanding Intimate Partner Violence in the European Union, 2023 Intimate partner violence IPV is the most common form of violence against women and the most extreme form of gender discrimination It poses a threat to the fundamental rights to dignity liberty security health and eventually the lives of women EU Member States have not established a common definition for IPV which means it is understood and measured differently across jurisdictions Femicide is an extreme form of gender based violence defined broadly as the killing of a woman or girl because of her gender EU and international institutions use various terms to refer to femicide including gender related killing of women and feminicide

Understanding and Addressing Violence Against Women, 2012 Intimate partner violence is one of the most common forms of violence against women and includes physical sexual and emotional abuse and controlling behaviours by an intimate partner Intimate partner violence IPV occurs in all settings and among all socioeconomic religious and cultural groups The overwhelming global burden of IPV is borne by women Although women can be violent in relationships with men often in self defence and violence sometimes occurs in same sex partnerships the most common perpetrators of violence against women are male intimate partners or ex partners By contrast men are far more likely to experience violent acts by strangers or acquaintances than by someone close to them

Intimate Partner Violence Samuel R. Aymer, 2021-09-09 Intimate Partner Violence Clinical Interventions with Partners and Their Children brings into focus an ecological and clinical frame for addressing the resulting psychological effects of intimate partner violence IPV Aymer presents a perspective that is often omitted from social science textbooks which are geared to policy practice tending to expose students to macro systemic ideas including criminal justice policies and procedures relative to IPV However this book expands clinical practice pedagogy by reinforcing the need for students to go beyond macro issues in order to deliver competent clinically based interventions that help partners and their children work through the consequential effects of partner violence Designed for graduate students in social work psychology gender studies and allied mental health programs it expands the discourse arguing that IPV is a complex psycho social political relational problem that must be understood from a multi theoretical perspective Through case studies theory research and the author s clinical practice wisdom this text will increase understanding of how to work clinically with women affected by IPV increase knowledge of how to work with abusive men heighten knowledge of how IPV affects children and adolescents expand knowledge of social and cultural notions and explore men s role in terms of advocating against gender based violence

The Perpetrator-Victim Relationship: An Important Clue to Understanding Intimate Partner Homicide in China Shuhong Zhao, 2022-01-15 This book is devoted to illustrating the significance of perpetrator victim relationship including its status and state in understanding intimate partner homicide IPH in the context of China today after comparing with the findings in the previous studies By analyzing the correlation between intimate relationships as a focal variable and other variables such as IPH characteristics and risk factors a deeper understanding of IPH in China today has emerged Finally this book shows that many perpetrators and victims had intimate relationships with people outside their marriages as the main reason for the rapid increase in the number of instances of IPH which seems to be in tandem with China's rapid modernization and urbanization Presenting the sole academic research that closely investigates the characteristics of intimate partner homicide in modern China the book is a valuable resource for not only for the Chinese government but also for Chinese and international researchers

Understanding Intimate Partner Violence in the EU, 2019 Gender based violence affects women disproportionately as it is a manifestation of the power imbalance between women and men It affects women's wellbeing autonomy and access to opportunities and remains one of the most persistent forms of gender inequality The eradication of all forms of violence against women including intimate partner violence is a declared objective of the EU and the European Institute for Gender Equality EIGE recognises its essential role in supporting Member States in meeting this objective To inform decision makers of its scope and make progress in this area EIGE has identified the role of high quality and comparable data on gender based violence as key for ensuring the dignity and protection of EU citizens in particular women and girls This report assesses the capability of Member States to collect relevant administrative data and thus support their efforts to meet the monitoring requirements set out by the Victims Rights Directive and the Istanbul Convention Taking the context and needs of each Member State into account EIGE has developed country specific recommendations to guide the improvement of administrative data collection on intimate partner violence at national level and promote the commitment of law enforcement agencies to this endeavour Furthermore to strengthen these efforts at the European level policy and technical recommendations for Eurostat on the specifics of data collection on gender based violence have been proposed EIGE will continue supporting Member States in adopting approaches to combating violence against women that focus on gender inequality as its root cause EIGE will seek to ensure partial monitoring through the domain of Violence in the Gender Equality Index which is based on robust data collection by the police and justice sectors EIGE's work will be a solid contribution to the implementation of EU and international legislation on combating gender based violence

Victims of Violence: Mathias L. Knudsen, 2020 Victims of Violence Support Challenges and Outcomes critically exposes some of the factors used in the risk determination of intimate partner violence alongside an analysis on the definition and management of the risk of recidivism Traditional beliefs and gender stereotypes underlying police attitudes associated with domestic violence are explored The authors provide considerations for domestic violence prevention and intervention programs highlighting the importance of adopting proactive and supportive attitudes in response to victims Researchers have measured intimate partner violence and survivors help seeking through a variety of different instruments making it difficult to paint a consistent picture of intimate partner violence. As such, this collection includes the results of a study comparing three measures so as to examine whether a certain measure produces a discernible pattern of results. A subsequent study analyzes the relationship between psychopathological symptomatology and intimate partner violence in a sample of 122 Portuguese women participants: 61 with a judiciary victim status and 61 without this status. To avoid discrepancies between medical reporting and the reconstruction of sex crimes, it is crucial to use strategies which focus not only on technical aspects of evidence collection but also on the way the victim's story will be recorded. Women most commonly experience violence victimisation by someone close to them. Therapeutic work with victims/survivors of intimate partner violence may range from immediate crisis intervention to long-term support. The award-winning PAWS FOR EMPOWERMENT program in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, is discussed, as well as the successes and challenges the program has faced in rescuing and training shelter dogs to serve as canine advocates. A qualitative study is presented which aims to further our understanding of how domestic violence between intimate partners can affect maternal parenting. The sample used comprised 15 mothers and victims of domestic violence, focusing on understanding how they conceive of their role as a parent. The authors go on to explore the extent to which domestic violence is regulated in Indonesia and the extent to which such regulation is implemented. This compilation also examines how the practice of forced marriage arrangements creates vulnerabilities for girls and young women. Accordingly, a discussion is provided concerning differences and similarities between the concepts of arranged and forced marriage and its relationship to sexual trafficking. The authors summarize findings on the association between cyber dating abuse and offline dating violence in a sample of 145 Portuguese adolescents and young adults. Additionally, a review of the literature on the phenomenon of multiple child and youth victimization is carried out, addressing the main risk factors, the implications for the development of children and young people, and guidelines for intervention. The impact that community violence exposure has on youth is assessed, accompanied with practical proposals for prevention. The concept of community violence and the different types of violence and crimes that could be involved are examined, mapping the prevalence of youth affected by this type of violence. Accordingly, to develop appropriate helpful responses to victims of violence and crime, it is particularly relevant to assess people's perceptions, to be aware of their victimization experiences, and to identify their needs. In closing, using Saint Lucia as an example, some of the challenges of supporting victims of intimate violence on an island are illustrated, discussing innovative policies and practices to best support victims in this context.

Men's Experiences of Violence in Intimate Relationships Marianne Inéz Lien, Jørgen Lorentzen, 2019-01-04. This open access book draws on a broad study on violence against men from both male and female partners in Norway to contribute to the research on intimate partner violence. It identifies similarities in men's experiences and backgrounds, including in their perceptions of their own victimisation. Marianne Inez Lien and Jørgen Lorentzen argue that the traditional gender power model should be modified and supplemented, and propose that we consider violence in terms of psychological supremacy rather than in terms of femininity and masculinity Men s Experiences of Violence in Intimate Relationships will appeal to students and scholars across a range of areas including criminology sociology and family violence and gender studies
