Congress. Senate. Committee on Appropriations. Subcommittee on Transportation, Treasury, the Judiciary, Housing and Urban Development, and Related Agencies, 2006 Communicative Capacity Koen P.R. Bartels, 2016-06-01 Participatory democracy has become an unshakable norm and its practice is widespread Nowadays public professionals and citizens regularly encounter each other in participatory practice to address shared problems But while the frequency pace and diversity of their public encounters has increased communicating in participatory practice remains a challenging fragile and demanding undertaking that often runs astray This unique book explores how citizens and public professionals communicate why this is so difficult and what could lead to more productive conversations Using timely original empirical research to make a thorough comparative analysis of cases in the United Kingdom the Netherlands and Italy it shows policy makers practitioners students and academics the value of communicative capacity Congressional Record United States. Congress, 1961 Savannas and Dry Forests Andrea Berardi, 2017-05-15 Parched landscapes biodiversity loss encroaching deserts and deforestation are some of the environmental crises taking place in tropical savannas and dry forests throughout the world To date much research into these regions has treated humans as outside or as an impact only However over and over again examples show that in fact humans are not external factors but integral components of these systems Humans are key determinants of savannas and dry forests affecting patterns and processes as well as impacts on natural resources Unless we understand the human environment relationship in these regions we will never truly identify the causes or be able to provide solutions This book therefore focuses on the roles of the past present and future human perceptions and actions on savannas and dry forests It examines how the views of local farmers NGO workers government officials and international scientists differ on the links between the social and ecological components of savannas It deals with these multiple perspectives by using systems diagramming and conceptual modelling to provide a clearer and more explicit understanding and to promote better communication between the various actors concerned Industrial Engineering, 1929

Nontimber Forest Products in the United States Eric T. Jones, Rebecca Jean McLain, James F. Weigand, 2002 A quiet revolution is taking place in America's forests. Once seen primarily as stands of timber, our woodlands are now prized as a rich source of a wide range of commodities from wild mushrooms and maple sugar to hundreds of medicinal plants whose uses have only begun to be fully realized. Now as timber harvesting becomes more mechanized and requires less labor, the image of the lumberjack is being replaced by that of the forager. This book provides the first comprehensive examination of nontimber forest products (NTFPs) in the United States, illustrating their diverse importance, describing the people who harvest them, and outlining the steps that are being taken to ensure access to them. As the first extensive national overview of NTFP policy and management specific to the United States, it brings together research from numerous disciplines and analytical perspectives such as economics, mycology, history, ecology, law, entomology, forestry, geography, and anthropology in order to provide a cohesive picture of the current and potential role of NTFPs. The contributors review the state of scientific knowledge of NTFPs by offering a survey of commercial and noncommercial products, an overview of uses and users, and discussions of sustainable management issues associated with ecology, cultural traditions, forest policy, and commerce. They examine some of the major social, economic, and biological benefits of NTFPs while also addressing the potential negative consequences of NTFP harvesting on forest ecosystems and on NTFP species populations. Within this wealth of information are rich accounts of NTFP use drawn from all parts of the American landscape, from the Pacific Northwest to the Caribbean. From honey production to a review of nontimber forest economies still active in the United States, such as the Ojibway harvest of plants recounted here, the book takes in the whole breadth of recent NTFP issues, including ecological concerns associated with the expansion of NTFP markets and NTFP tenure issues on federally managed lands. No other volume offers such a comprehensive overview of NTFPs in North America. By examining all aspects of these products, it contributes to the development of more sophisticated policy and management frameworks for not only ensuring their ongoing use but also protecting the future of our forests.

Reforming the European Commission Michael W. Bauer, 2013-10-18 Many international and supranational organisations have lately been busy modernising their internal administration. But nowhere has management change received a similar amount of attention than in the case of the European Commission. Although the perception prevails that the Commission has been losing out in recent years, this vivid interest, academic as well as public, in the so-called Kinnock reform suggests that this organisation still remains at the heart of the Union. The proposition of this book, thus, is simple. If it remains true that the Commission is an essential part within the admittedly complex equation of EU policy-making, changes of the administration basis of this actor are likely to have broader implications. Consequently, this special issue poses three crucial questions about the recent administrative reform of the European Commission: why was such a comprehensive reform possible? what are its specific implications for the Commission?

as an organisation and what is the likely impact for the policy process In short this book puts the organisational base of EU policy making centre stage In the quest for answers the authors of the subsequent chapters take distinct perspectives use various research strategies and methods and attempt to solve diverse empirical puzzles But all attempt to add to our understanding of this organisational base and how to systematically study it This book was published as a special issue of the Journal of European Public Policy Industrial Management Review ,1965 Office Executives' Series American Management Association,1927 American Machinist & Automated Manufacturing ,1923 Journal of the American Institute of Architects American Institute of Architects,1924 Practical Cooperative Marketing Andrew William McKay,Charles Homer Lane,1928 Industrial Psychology Monthly Donald Anderson Laird,1928 Publications of the National Electric Light Association.- ,1923 Proceedings of National Electric Light Association National Electric Light Association.
