argues that the colonizing imperative for reforming the Irish in an age of imperial expansion constitutes a largely unrecognized but crucial element in the rhetorical project of English nation formation. By situating her readings within the varying historical and rhetorical contexts that shape them, she revises the critical orthodoxies surrounding colonial discourse that currently prevail in Irish and English studies and offers a fresh perspective on important aspects of Victorian culture.

Branch-lines Guy Cuthbertson, Lucy Newlyn, 2008. When Edward Thomas died in the First World War, very few of his poems had been published, but he is now recognised as one of the finest and most influential poets of the last century. Although often referred to as a poet's poet, his writing has an almost universal appeal. He wrote accessibly on traditional themes: the natural world, human relationships, transience and mortality. And yet his poetry is alive with the critical intelligence that came from years of writing non-fiction and reviewing verse. Branch Lines captures the range of Thomas's achievement, not least by combining poetry with prose. In this unique collection, fifty-five contemporary poets reflect on Thomas's craftsmanship and enduring power. Some have chosen poems of their own in which they detect his influence; others have written new poems in his honour. Each poet has also contributed a piece of prose, and the volume contains an introduction, four critical essays, illustrations, a Foreword by Andrew Motion and an Afterword by Michael Longley. Branch Lines offers a fascinating perspective on the workings of literary influence, with personal insights from some of the leading poet-critics of our time. The collection has a double value: it is a celebration of Thomas and a dignified tribute to his achievement; at the same time, it bears witness to his powers of regeneration. CONTRIBUTORS INCLUDE Dannie Abse, Gillian Clarke, David Constantine, Robert Crawford, Kevin Crossley-Holland, Peter Dale, Jane Draycott, U.A.
