

STATISTICS (DATA) – LEVEL 2

Subject outline:

Statistics is about extracting meaning from data. Statistics involves the collection and analysis of data.

The aim of this section is to learn types of data, standard deviation, box plots and another plots

Statistics are used in the car industry, business economics, weather forecasting, marketing and in many other fields.

Skill 1: Types of data

Surveys are used to collect statistical data.

A population is an entire group about which some information is required to be determined.

A sample is a group that has been chosen from a population.

Since a sample would be chosen to represent the whole population – it is important that the sample is chosen carefully and without bias.

Bias in sampling is when the sample fails to represent the population.

The data gathered can be categorised as follows:
