Doing Things with Words in the First Christian Century Francis Gerald Downing,2000-10-01 Although its religious heritage was that of a variegated Judaism the tiny early Christian movement was nevertheless much more complexly and richly linked with the Graeco Roman world in which it came to birth than is usually allowed for In particular ordinary people were capable of a sophisticated use of words that can be detected also in the New Testament writings But the use of words in Graeco Roman times was often very different from what we suppose and this collection of studies attempts to identify some of the anachronisms that still pervade even the best of modern scholarship

The First Christian Centuries Paul McKechnie,2001

The value of this study lies not in providing a comprehensive narrative of the origins and growth of the early church It lies in critically examining key historical issues in sustained conversation with contemporary scholarship and the ancient sources McKechnie will be valued by both students and scholars of early Christianity as an intelligent and informed companion who offers repeated and valuable insights into this critical era of Christian beginnings

Mediterranean society Jewish and Christian included expressly favoured harmonious order in society in individuals in communication and in thought Its common basis was the patriarchal family the rule of law rational self control and rational thought Yet there was also resistance to oppressive and unjust order in all spheres and while law could be held educative yet there were substantial first century critiques of law not just Paul s and awareness that judicial procedures could be chaotic and biased Strands of such dissidence appear in Jesus and in Paul with significant relevance for any understanding of the early Christian movement s and contemporary Judaism s in Graeco Roman context but also with important implications for any practical reflections and application

The Early Christian Church Archbishop of Quebec Carrington, Philip Carrington (b. 1892), 1957 The Christian Century, 1921 Religion in the first christian century, From Olivet to Patmos Louise Seymour Houghton, 2017-05-05 Excerpt from From Olivet to Patmos The First Christian Century in Picture and Story

During forty days after Jesus arose from the dead he remained so far as we can know on earth He was not with his disciples all the time but only appeared to them now and again sometimes to one alone sometimes to the Eleven for Judas was dead Once or twice he appeared to a large number of those who believed in him We can understand now why our Lord took such a course as this It was to make his disciples understand and really feel that even when he was absent from their sight he was actually present with them If he had remained with them all the time during those forty days it would have been as hard for them to feel this when at last he left them to re Turn into heaven as it would have been at any time before his death They would have been almost as crushed and hopeless at the Ascension as they were when Jesus was crucified And if he had not appeared to them more than once or twice after the resurrection they would soon have found it hard to believe that he had risen from the dead at all They would have come to think that perhaps they had deceived themselves perhaps they had only had a sort of vision of him and they certainly would not have been able to preach with convincing power that Christ was risen indeed But these six weeks of Jesus frequent appearances and disappearances while it taught them that they could not have him always with them also gave them a sense of constant communion with him They felt that he knew where they were and what they were doing even when they did not see him among them and they began to understand in some measure that it was not necessary that he should remain on earth in order to be with them always as he had promised to be They learned to understand that whether absent or present his love and guidance would be always theirs and so they became prepared for that final parting which was not in reality a parting since it could not deprive them of the assurance that he was their ever present Saviour and friend
