Transforming Leadership for Service Business Yong Nie, 2017-07-18 Doctoral Thesis Dissertation from the year 2014 in the subject Business economics Business Management Corporate Governance grade A Japan Advanced Institute of Science and Technology language English abstract Customers are increasingly becoming active participants and co creators of value in the mobile Internet era With this trend employees are encouraged to engage in active dialogue with customers effectively manage customer diversity and co create personalized experiences Such changes challenge the leadership The relevant literature reveals that the significance to leadership of shared vision has attracted attention and become widely acceptable However there is a large gap in the literature regarding how to model the building of shared vision in service business Our study represents a first attempt to shed light on how vision co creation between leaders and employees can affect the leadership in corporate transformation Based on comparisons of the leadership literature regarding product oriented and service oriented companies we hypothesised about vision co creation with employees Then we conducted an in depth case study in a leading software company in China and interviews in four multinational IT companies in Japan This study suggests that vision co creation with employees is imperative for leaders in today s service dominant business In the co creation process six relevant working states of employees are defined non engagement expectation satisfaction engagement loyalty and creativity As a firm creates a new vision or makes the existing corporate vision into a shared vision it goes through these phases We propose specific implications of the issues and focus on each phase to address the concerns This research makes a contribution by addressing concerns that many companies are over managed and under led Traditional management systems such as management rules PDCA performance appraisals and incentive systems are still indispensable but are not enough to lead employees to work in the high tier state The co creation process makes the new vision come alive so that it can be imagined experienced pursued and worked hard for In the final chapter we provide suggestions for future research The position centred one person leadership described in the previous literature leaves the substantial talents of employees largely untapped

Women in Leadership Positions in the People's Republic of China Maria Adnane,2020-06-02 Master s Thesis from the year 2012 in the subject Business economics Business Management Corporate Governance grade 1 7 Heilbronn University language English abstract Women are still significantly underrepresented in Top Management positions and leadership is still associated with the male gender as leadership theories traditionally focus on men This is especially evident in China which has one of the world s highest female labor participation but a female share of only eight percent on the corporate boards Although Chinese women s tertiary educational attainment is now equal to the tertiary education of Chinese men they still face many barriers on their way to the top The strong influence of Confucian values perceiving women as inferior to men remains noticeable until today and women find themselves exposed to a strongly patriarchal business environment As being traditionally the main care givers of their families they are deemed to be expensive potential mothers and thus gender preference can be observed second Classical leadership theories of the Western culture as well as of the Chinese culture are introduced to provide a common understanding of their approaches Further the situation of women in the past and of today is being compared as well as their leadership styles access to managerial leadership positions and the barriers they face Since educational attainment of both genders does not explain why women are rarely found on the upper managerial ranks other reasons that could be a barrier for women s career advancement are examined in this research Management Arthur G. Bedeian,1993

Transformational Leadership Edward J. Shelton PhD.,2012-10-03 Dr Shelton introduces his latest book Transformational Leadership which is an insightful review of how effective leaders develop skills behaviors and respect from those around them Transformational Leadership methods highlight the importance of individualized attention trust and relationship building by identifying preferred leadership characteristics and behaviors making it a philosophy and a way of life Transformational leadership is a powerful change agent It engages individuals leading them to change improve and participate in a meaningful way These leadership qualities are not secret and have been applied throughout history to cause willful behavior changes The results have proven to build trust kindness integrity and empowerment Effective communication motivation and courage all are examined in detail with supporting cases and antidotes Effective leadership is a learned art that creates an exemplary role model for others Transformational leaders are respected because they put the interests of those around them before their own. These leaders inspire and stimulate critical thinking, promote team work and encourage individual development. Dr. Shelton often says, "people do not leave their organization, they leave their boss." Trust, motivation, and engagement are leadership outcomes that separate organizations that are led by managers versus leaders. Dr. Edward Shelton is an international speaker with a powerful voice in the dialogue on leadership, behavior, and culture. He advanced his philosophy of Transformational Leadership development as a HR professional with international organizations that include Saudi Aramco Oil Company, Penn State University as an assistant professor, and the U.S. Army as an Infantry officer. Dr. Shelton holds a PhD in Business Administration with research in leadership and culture. Dr. Shelton introduces his latest book, Transformational Leadership, which is an insightful review of how effective leaders develop skills, behaviors, and respect from those around them. Transformational Leadership methods highlight the importance of individualized attention, trust, and building relationships by identifying preferred leadership characteristics and behaviors, making it a philosophy and a way of life. Transformational Leadership is filled with examples of successes and failures which provide a unique look into culture, personality disorders, constructive leadership practices, and dark leadership. Motivation: People don't leave the company, they leave their boss. Don't slap the dolphin; they will never perform again. The Physician Rule: Use the least radical surgery to cure the problem. Recognition: A pat on the back is a few inches from a kick in the pants, yet the results are miles apart. See others for not what they are now, but for what they can become. Trust: People will trust you if you have integrity, benevolence, and you have perfected your skill. Communication: Leaders use effective communications which are expressions of affection and not anger, facts and not fabrication, compassion and not contention, respect and not ridicule, counsel and not criticism, correction and not condemnation. Their words are spoken with clarity and not with confusion. They may be tender or they may be tough, but they must always be tempered. Courage: Moral courage is the willingness to stand firm on values, principles, and convictions. It enables all leaders to stand up for what they believe is right, regardless of the consequences. Leaders who take full responsibility for their decisions and actions, even when things go wrong, display moral courage. Doing nothing wrong is not the same as doing the right thing. First they came for the communists and I did not speak out because I was not a communist. Then they came for the socialists and I did not speak out because I was not a socialist. Then they came for the trade unionists and I did not speak out because I was not a trade unionist. Then they came for the Jews and I did not speak out because I was not a Jew. Then they came for me and there was no one left to speak out for me. Then they came. Martin Niemöller. Destructive Leadership: Perhaps the four most common destructive forms of communication are those of Lying. Lying will destroy a leader's integrity and trust. Integrity is the core of our character. Without integrity, we have a weak foundation upon which to build other leadership characteristics. Blaming: This is a condemning communication. When people are afraid to accept accountability, they begin to place the blame on others. Weak leaders tend to blame mistakes and problems on others or on circumstances. When we attempt to place responsibility for our choices on others, we are responding in a leaderless manner More importantly do not allow those under you to fall into the habit of blaming encourage them to seek root causes never blame or point fingers Criticizing Positive or constructive criticism is feedback given with the purpose of helping another person to grow and to develop This is both helpful and needful and is generally accepted and appreciated Negative criticism is intended to hurt and often to defame and destroy This caustic communication is cruel and it tends to crush the character of all of those whom it is directed Anger This is perhaps the most common form of destructive communication Anger causes anguish to everyone who experiences the feeling as well as to those who are the recipients of this emotional explosion Anger shows a lack of self control and an inability to relate in a professional way to others It is a senseless substitute for self control It is sometimes used as a selfish strategy to gain control of a relationship Dr Edward Shelton is the author of They Love You They Hate You Discovering Leadership He is a respected international conference speaker on preferred leadership knowledge transfer and motivation Dr Shelton's work reflects a lifelong fascination of leadership as he has gained unique perspectives with his experiences that span industry academia and military

The Transforming Leader Carol Pearson, 2012-06-04 No organizational leaders can succeed in today's fast evolving and highly connected world on their own To succeed today's leaders must not only optimize all their own faculties mental sharpness emotional depth imagination and creativity but also utilize the full capacities of those around them in a collaborative and creative manner The prestigious contributors to this volume draw on psychology sociology neuroscience social networking theory organizational change theory myths and traditions and actual experiences to discover how leaders today achieve transformational results The Transforming Leader offers an overview of what transformational leadership is how it works and how it is evolving In doing so it reframes the challenge of leading in today's interdependent unpredictable world

No Child Left Behind and the Transformation of Federal Education Policy, 1965-2005 Patrick J. McGuinn, 2006 Education is intimately connected to many of the most important and contentious questions confronting American society from race to jobs to taxes and the competitive pressures of the global economy have only enhanced its significance Elementary and secondary schooling has long been the province of state and local governments but when George W Bush signed into law the No Child Left Behind Act in 2002 it signaled an unprecedented expansion of the federal role in public education This book provides the first balanced in depth analysis of how No Child Left Behind NCLB became law Patrick McGuinn a political scientist with hands on experience in secondary education explains how this happened despite the country s long history of decentralized school governance and the longstanding opposition of both liberals and conservatives to an active reform oriented federal role in schools His book provides the essential political context for understanding NCLB the controversies surrounding its implementation and forthcoming debates over its reauthorization how the struggle to define the federal role in school reform took center stage in debates over the appropriate role of the government in promoting opportunity and social welfare He places the evolution of the federal role in schools within the context of broader institutional ideological and political changes that have swept the nation since the 1965 Elementary and Secondary Education Act chronicles the concerns raised by the 1983 report A Nation at Risk and shows how education became a major campaign issue for both parties in the 1990s McGuinn argues that the emergence of swing issues such as education can facilitate major policy change even as they influence the direction of wider political debates and partisan conflict McGuinn traces the Republican shift from seeking to eliminate the U S Department of Education to embracing federal leadership in school reform then details the negotiations over NCLB the forces that shaped its final provisions and the ways in which the law constitutes a new federal education policy regime against which states have now begun to rebel and that only by understanding the unique dynamics of national education politics will reformers be able to craft a more effective national role in school reform
