Transforming Gender And Development In East Asia:

Transforming Gender and Development in East Asia Esther Ngan-ling Chow, 2013-12-02 Transforming Gender and Development in East Asia brings together a collection of original essays from top scholars in the United States and Asia to explore the centrality of gender in the process of economic development in East Asia Contributors demonstrate through ethnography personal narratives field observation and in depth interviews the essential parts women have played in the national growth economic restructuring and industrialization of East Asian countries including South Korea Taiwan China Hong Kong Singapore and China

Feminized Migration in East and Southeast Asia Keiko Yamanaka, Nicola Piper, United Nations Research Institute for Social Development, 2005 The transfer of foreign women within the region from the low income economies the Philippines Indonesia Viet Nam Pakistan Bangladesh among others to the high income ones Singapore Malaysia Hong Kong Special Administrative Region SAR Taiwan Province of China the Republic of Korea and Japan intensifies existing gender inequality economic injustice and ethnic discrimination International migration is however a contradictory process that while providing migrant women with opportunities for social mobility also subjects them to abuses and exploitation The majority of Asia's migrant women are independent contract workers seeking employment abroad in order to augment family incomes and personal savings Empowerment results from their everyday resistance to existing power structures and from the opportunity to accumulate individual and collective resources Opportunities have also opened up for Asia's growing civil society to challenge oppressive policies and practices affecting migrants

gender dimensions of employment are brought out to verify if reduction in labour market inequality can result in improving the position of women in other spheres encompassing the decision making process both within the household and outside the household Issues relating to urbanisation and rural urban migration are also covered to understand the dynamics of urban poverty and to bring out the challenges of population transfer given the spatial concentration of growth The job search practices pursued by the low income households are often pursued in terms of informal networks What problems are associated with such mechanisms in experiencing improvements in wellbeing levels are covered in the present volume On the whole the volume offers an explanation of limited poverty reduction in a situation of rapid economic growth on the basis of an inter disciplinary framework though efforts are being made to keep the methodology quantitatively rigorous

International Handbook of Urban Education William T. Pink, George W. Noblit, 2008-09-03 It is evident that urban education has become the central focus of educators at the present time In the U S for example almost one third of all school age children attend schools in large urban school districts It is in these urban schools where the diversity of cultures and languages is highest and where student learning is most problematic What has emerged from recent work to improve urban schools is the insight that there is no one size fits all panacea Rather we have discovered that the local context shapes in critically important ways what will be effective at the school level The universality of the problematics with urban education together with the importance of understanding the local or situated context of improvement interventions brings into sharp focus the importance and timeliness of an undertaking like the International Handbook of Urban Education An important focus of the International Handbook of Urban Education will be the interrogation of both the social and political factors that lead to different problem posing and subsequent solutions within each region An important question to be answered for example is what it takes in terms of resources political will and policy actions to improve urban education
