Translation as Text Albrecht Neubert, Gregory M. Shreve, 1992 As translation plays an increasingly important role in industry science technology commerce politics and the international economy the search for better more informed methods of translation proceeds on a global scale New sometimes competing models for describing translation are being developed and applied These new models are interdisciplinary borrowing concepts from linguistics literary criticism cognitive science psychology and sociology

Translating the Perception of Text CLIVE. SCOTT, Professor of European Literature Clive Scott, 2020-06-30 This book is about translating the perception of text but that involves the elaboration from reading of a text of perception a text capable of registering the complexities of language based perception It offers the phenomenology that has its primary source in the work of Merleau Ponty

Translation Translation, 2021-07-26 Translation Translation contributes to current debate on the question of translation dealt with in an interdisciplinary perspective with implications not only of a theoretical order but also of the didactic and the practical orders In the context of globalization the question of translation is fundamental for education and responds to new community needs with reference to Europe and more extensively to the international world In its most obvious sense translation concerns verbal texts and their relations among different languages However to remain within the sphere of verbal signs languages consist of a plurality of different languages that also relate to each other through translation processes Moreover translation occurs between verbal languages and nonverbal languages and among nonverbal languages without necessarily involving verbal languages Thus far the allusion is to translation processes within the sphere of anthroposemiosis But translation occurs among signs and the signs implicated are those of the semiotic sphere in its totality which are not exclusively signs of the linguistic verbal order Beyond anthroposemiosis translation is a fact of life and invests the entire biosphere or biosemiosphere as clearly evidenced by research in biosemiotics for where there is life there are signs and where there are signs or semiotic processes there is translation indeed semiotic processes are translation processes According to this approach reflection on translation obviously cannot be restricted to the domain of linguistics but must necessarily involve semiotics the general science or theory of signs In this theoretical framework essays have been included not only from major translation experts but also from researchers working in different areas in addition to semiotics and linguistics also philosophy literary criticism cultural studies gender studies biology and the medical sciences All scholars work on problems of translation in the light of their own special competencies and interests

Exploring the Self, Subjectivity, and Character across Japanese and Translation Texts Senko K. Maynard, 2022-01-17 From the perspective of philosophical contrastive pragmatics this study investigates our multiple selves as manifested in how we use language Based on analyses of original and translation texts of Japanese and English literary works the Japanese self is proposed as being fundamentally empty and yet richly populated with multiple subjective aspects characters and characteristics Incorporating the concept of emptiness drawn from Japanese philosophical traditions and postmodernism primarily developed in the West selves evidenced in grammar style and variation are investigated applying interpretive resources of linguistic subjectivity character and character speak Expressive gaps found in source and target texts across two languages lead us toward different ontological views and guide us to engage in the rethinking of the concept of self

The Bilingual Text Jan Walsh Hokenson, Marcella Munson, 2016-01-29 Bilingual texts have been left outside the mainstream of both translation theory and literary history Yet the tradition of the bilingual writer moving between different sign systems and audiences to create a text in two languages is a rich and venerable one going back at least to the Middle Ages The self translated bilingual text was commonplace in the multilingual world of medieval and early modern Europe frequently bridging Latin and the vernaculars While self translation persisted among cultured elites it diminished during the consolidation of the nation states in the long era of nationalistic monolingualism only to resurge in the postcolonial era The Bilingual Text makes a first step toward providing the fields of translation studies and comparative literature with a comprehensive account of literary self translation in the West It tracks the shifting paradigms of bilinguality across the centuries and addresses the urgent questions that the bilingual text raises for translation theorists today Is each part of the bilingual text a separate original creation or is each incomplete without the other Is self translation a unique genre Can either version be split off into a single language or literary tradition How can two linguistic versions of a text be fitted into standard models of foreign and domestic texts and cultures Because such texts defeat standard categories of analysis The Bilingual Text reverses the usual critical gaze highlighting not dissimilarities but continuities across versions allowing for dissimilarities within orders of correspondence and englobing the literary as well as linguistic and cultural dimensions of the text Emphasizing the arcs of historical change in concepts of language and translation that inform each case study The
