

A young man's thoughts before June the 16th

Fazel Johennesse

tomorrow i travel on a road that winds to the top of the hill i take with me only the sweet memories of my youth my heart aches for my mother for Friday nights with friends around a table with the broad belch of beer i ask only for a sad song sung by a woman with downturned eye and strummed by an old man with a broken brow o sing my sad song sing for me for my sunset is drenched with red

Background notes on poet:

Fazel Johennesse (1954 -) is a South African poet. He wrote most of his poetry during the 1970s and early 1980s. He and the poet Chris van Wyk started a Black Consciousness (a movement that promoted an awareness of the dignity and rights of black people, started by Steve Biko) literary magazine, Witfe, which gave a voice to young aspirant black writers. However, the magazine was short-lived, as it was banned by the apartheid government.

Title

On 16 June 1976, high school children from Soweto marched to protest against the government law that half of their schooling had to be in Afrikaans, which they saw as the language of the apartheid leaders and oppressors. The police shot live bullets and teargas, and many were injured or killed. After this tragic episode many young people went into exile to join the underground resistance. In this poem, Johennesse imagines himself as one of those teenagers the day before the event, foreseeing the tragedy that will take place.
