from his teachings such bits of truth as my mind is ready to receive I am willing to say I don't know and to accept from others that which appeals to me as truth not because the other says that it is truth but because my mind recognizes it as such I take my own wherever I find it because I recognize it as mine I know that all students and teachers get their knowledge from the only source of supply they can't get it from anywhere else And if some other fellow happens to see a particular bit of truth before I do I gladly accept a portion of it from his hands be he king or beggar while if I happen to see the thing first I will gladly share it with all who are ready for it and who may want it without feeling that I am a leader or teacher or that they are followers or disciples We are all fellow students that's all I recognize no man as my master and I spurn the person who would call me Master if there be any so foolish This feet sitting talk makes me very very weary
